Gov. Davey Orders 4,800 Troops to Youngstown; Roosevelt Asks Steel Heads to Keep Mills Closed

Senate Balks On Robinson Plan to Shift WPA Burden

Deserts Party Leader, Defeats 25% Local Share Proviso.

Byrnes' Proposal Also Is Rejected

Glass, Borah Speeches Unavailing; Relief Bill Vote Today.

By Robert C. Albright.

Over opposition of his own party leaders, President Roosevelt yesterday wrested a vindication of Administration relief policies from the Senate.

By a vote of 34-to-49, the chamber refused to take the first step toward sharing Federal relief expenses with States, counties and cities.

The test came on an amendment of Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson to require all communities able to do so to put up 25 per cent of local WPA relief costs.

Robinson, who left the Administration reservation for the first time on this issue, in turn was deserted by two-thirds of his Senate Democratic following on the ballot that followed.

The split leadership alignment left Robinson's own assistant leader, Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, marshaling Administration forces against the relief "matching" plan.

Glass Protests Spending.

Impassioned speeches against current spending policies by Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, and Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, failed to salvage the first serious effort to shift a larger burden of relief responsibility on local governments.

Twenty-one Democrats and 12 Republicans voted with Robinson, but their ballots were overwhelmed by "no" votes of 44 Democrats, 2 Republicans, 1 Progressive, 1 Farmer-Laborite and 1 Independent.

Immediately afterward, the Senate rejected, 25 to 58, an amendment by Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, to require communities to bear an even larger share—40 per cent.

Final vote on the $1,500,000,000 relief bill went over until today, when passage, in much the form favored by the Administration, is assured. But before recessing, the Senate approved a committee amendment extending the life of PWA for two years, and providing $300,000,000 for PWA through RFC purchase of securities.

Although Robinson in his 25 per cent proposal was supported by the most vigorous of the Senate court plan opponents, the majority leader's cleavage with the Administration appeared confined to the one issue of economy and relief.

"Lump Sums" Condemned.

Bitterly condemning "lump sum" appropriations, uncontrolled spending and Treasury financing methods, Senator Glass rose to support the Robinson 25 per cent local "sharing" plan.

"I feel so intensely that the Congress of the United States is precipitating this country into actual bankruptcy with its extravagance that I am utterly opposed to the whole business and shall vote against it," Senator Glass told the Senate.

"We boast of the credit of the Government! we have it announced in the newspapers that subscriptions to Treasury issues are tremendously oversubscribed," said Glass.

"As a matter of fact they are not subscriptions at all; they are allocations. The Treasury certificates

Police in Paris Balk Socialist Rally for Blum

3,000 Dispersed; Chautemps Expected to Head New Government.

By the Associated Press.

Paris (Tuesday), June 22.—Mobile guards early today dispersed 3,000 Socialists attempting to stage a demonstration for the resigned Premier Leon Blum.

The crowd had attended a political rally in Luna Park and gathered afterward along the Place de la Concorde.

Strong forces of the mobile guards were stationed along the Champs Elysee, however, and kept the would-be demonstrators moving.

Several minor incidents were reported, but no one was injured. The Socialist rally had affirmed its confidence in the People's Front government of Blum, and speakers attacked the Senate for refusing to vote him financial powers which he asked.

New Popular Front.

It appeared, nevertheless, that Camille Chautemps would head a new People's Front government.

Blum, first Socialist premier of the republic, resigned early yesterday after a conservative Senate twice had refused the powers he demanded to deal with the nation's financial troubles by decree.

Chautemps, 52-year-old Radical-Socialist leader and twice before premier, was commanded by President Albert LeBrun to form the new government. Last night he announced he hoped "to give final acceptance" of the mandate to the President today.

Chautemps was minister of state—minister without portfolio—in the Blum cabinet, and his party was one of those forming the People's Front which had kept Blum and his left wing cabinet in office a year and 17 days.

Gets Encouragement.

Because Socialist support was considered essential to success of his effort to form a cabinet, Chautemps offered a portfolio to Blum as a leader of that party.

Friends of Chautemps said he was ready to offer the ministry of finances to Georges Bonnet, Ambassador to the United States and Radical Socialist deputy.

Bonnet's six-month period as ambassador is nearly at an end and he would be free to accept the new post. He accepted the Washington appointment for the limited period so that he would not have to forfeit his chamber seat.

Otherwise it was believed the new cabinet would be almost identical with the preceding one. Blum probably will not accept a portfolio, friends declared.

Blum withheld his answer until he consults his Socialist colleagues in their national council meeting today. Socialist participation in a Chautemps cabinet appeared to Europe Seeks U.S. Aid to Halt Arms to Spain

Britain May Quit 'Hands-Off' Pact; Reich Asks Naval Action.

By the Associated Press.

London, June 21.—The 27-nation European nonintervention committee decided tonight to seek aid from the United States and other countries after a sharply worded British declaration that the committee had failed thus far to keep arms from either side in the Spanish civil war.

The British stand regarding the "present state of affairs as thoroughly unsatisfactory" was believed by some observers to be a veiled threat to quit the "hands off Spain" alliance.

Lord Plymouth, chairman and British representative on the committee, told a sub-committee session that effort must be intensified to halt the flow of munitions to the civil war combatants.

"If there is no early evidence of such co-operation," he warned, "the British government would feel bound to take this fact into account in giving further consideration to the situation."

New Agreement Sought.

Thereupon the sub-committee agreed to solicit aid from non-European nations through "informal negotiations" conducted by Britain. Presumably the nations would be asked to agree not to sell or ship war materials to Spain.

The decision came after Germany announced postponement of a visit to London by her foreign minister, Baron Konstantin von Neurath.

Berlin said the situation created by "repeated red Spanish attacks on German warships" made Von Neurath's presence at home imperative.

Cancellation of Von Neurath's visit, reliable informants said, had brought home to the British how seriously Germany views the Leipzig incident—(alleged attack against the Nazi cruiser by Spanish government submarines).

German sources in London asserted the situation is much more serious than the British have realized and that a "crisis may be reached at any moment."

Nazis Seek Revenge.

Authoritative quarters believed that Germany canceled Von Neurath's visit in an effort to enforce a demand that Britain, France and Italy join her in an "impressive demonstration"—possibly naval action—against the Spanish government.

The four powers are parties to last week's agreement concerning continuation of the "hands off" naval patrol of Spain's coasts.

Basis of Germany's latest pressure on the neutrality committee was her assertion that twice last week Spanish government submarines fired torpedoes at the German

Fight Opens On Rise in Realty Tax

Capper Fires First Gun Against House Boost of 20 Cents.

Commissioners Stand Pat; Chain Store Levy Draws Fire.

By James D. Secrest.

A move to eliminate the 20-cent realty tax increase from the omnibus District revenue bill passed by the House got under way on Capitol Hill yesterday as the Commissioners decided to stand pat on the tax program adopted by the Kennedy sub-committee.

Senator Capper, of Kansas, ranking minority member of the Senate District Committee, fired the opening gun against the realty tax increase on the ground it would impose an unfair burden on home owners.

Other members of the committee indicated they might join a fight on the tax dictated by House leaders as a substitute to the income levy.

Simultaneously Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, and the District heads announced their opposition to the Dies chain store tax as plans were made for public hearings later in the week.

The threat of a revival of the sales tax, proposed by the Commissioners and rejected by the Kennedy sub-committee, appeared again as Senators criticized the business privilege tax.

Both King and Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, suggested the latter levy needs some revising, at least, while Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, said he has received complaints against the realty tax increase, the chain store levy and the gross receipts tax.

Figures Are Juggled.

While restoration of the income tax appeared impossible because of the attitude of the House, District officials began juggling figures in such a way that the Senate committee might find the extra realty revenue unnecessary.

Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal, who drafted the business privilege tax, revised his earlier estimate as to its revenue and predicted it will raise "at least $5,000,000" instead of $3,000,000 as originally forecast.

He said the return might run as high as the $6,000,000 estimated by the Board of Trade.

Even with a $5,000,000 return, however, the House sub-committee calculations would be considerably altered. This sub-committee started out to raise $6,100,000, which was the deficit in the District supply bill as it passed the House.

The tax measure adopted by the House last week may raise as much as $10,250,000, exclusive of the $1,500,000 motor vehicle weight levy, which has been allocated to a special highway fund.

Total Estimate $10,250,000.

The $10,250,000 estimate is arrived at by taking the $5,000,000 figure for the business privilege return and adding the following:

Realty tax boost of 20 cents, $2,500,000; inheritance tax, $800,000 (Dies amendment may increase this amount substantially); insurance rate increase, $200,000; chain store tax, $750,000, and extra revenue $1,000,000.

Even if the chain store tax is eliminated by the Senate, there still would be an aggregate revenue of $9,250,000, according to these estimates, so that the striking out of the $2,500,000 in realty taxes would leave $6,750,000, or some $600,000 more than the House intended to raise.

Offsetting this, however, is the $7,500,000 deficit in the District supply bill as it passed the Senate. Should this be sustained, at least that amount in new taxes would be necessary.

However, as compromises are the

Lewis Urges Curb for Strike 'Butchery'; Militia to Isolate Strike-Torn Areas

Unions Appeal to White House; 4 Plants Set to Reopen at 7 A. M.

Bloodshed Certain, Telegram Warns

Pickets at Warren Defy Court Order, Mass at Gates; Clash Feared.

By the Associated Press.

Youngstown, Ohio, June 21. In a desperate eleventh-hour appeal to President Roosevelt, C. I. O. leaders tonight begged the Nation's Chief Executive "in the name of God" to halt a back-to-work march into four strike-bound steel mills set for 7 a. m. tomorrow.

"Any attempt to open the (mill) gates will automatically bring terrific violence and bloodshed," said the telegraphic appeal, signed by the presidents of three C. I. O. lodges in Youngstown.

"Already two of our men were brutally murdered Saturday evening," it continued, referring to a fierce pitched battle between C. I. O. pickets and police at the Republic Steel plant.

"In the name of God and the overwhelming majority of steel workers of Youngstown * * * we urge you to immediately intervene in this critical hour and avoid a calamity and disaster that Ohio may remember for decades to come."

At Warren, another troubled spot in the embroiled Mahoning Valley of Ohio, the C. I. O. threatened a general strike, after a court injunction was issued today forbidding picketing of the Republic plant here.

Contract Again Denied.

Major developments in the labor struggle tonight included:

1. In Washington, Representative Cox (Democrat), Georgia, told the House that if existing local police forces are inadequate to cope with the far-flung strike crisis, "every soldier of the Republic" should be summoned "to enforce Federal power and uphold the majesty of the law."

Pickets Defy Order.

2. At Warren, Ohio, leaders claiming to represent 10,000 members of organized labor threatened to call a general strike after Judge Lynn B. Griffith granted Republic Steel an injunction restraining the activities of strike pickets.

In defiance of the court order, picket lines began to mass near the Republic mill gates, most of them armed with clubs.

3. At Massillon, Ohio, Mayor Henry W. Keier informed a "back-to-work" committee of nonunion employes of Republic Steel he would ask Gov. Martin L. Davey for help to reinforce the local police force.

4. At Johnstown, Pa., still under martial law proclaimed by Gov. George H. Earle, Col. Augustine S. Janeway withdrew between 100 and 150 State troopers from duty as tension slackened around the shut-down Cambria works of Bethlehem steel.

An ominous note of warning against the back-to-work march in

New Dealer to Quit High Federal Jobs to Organize Employes.

JACOB BAKER.

Tall, quick-smiling Jacob Baker, prominent New Dealer, friend of Harry Hopkins and recently chosen by President Roosevelt as chairman of the Commission of Inquiry on Co-operative Enterprises in Europe, has been picked by John L. Lewis to organize Federal workers into a new branch of the C. I. O.

The Lewis organization yesterday threw wide the doors to Uncle Sam's personnel—will band them into an organization to be known as the United Federal Workers of America—and placed organization in Baker's hands.

Last night Baker announced he will leave the Government's service by July 1. He is assistant administrator of the WPA.

This formal announcement by the C. I. O. regarding its attitude toward the pleas for affiliation made recently by a number of lodges that once comprised the liberal wing of the American Federation of Government Employes, was made by Denny Lewis, brother of the C. I. O. head.

The set-up for the new wing is as follows:

Fifteen lodges form the toe-hold for the C. I. O.'s grapple for strength in Government ranks. These are the seven lodges suspended this month by the A. F. G. E.'s executive council's special investigating committee; the five lodges ousted by the Detroit convention of the A. F. G. E. last September; the Interdepartmental Lodge, Loans and Currency Lodge and the Rural Elec-

Streicher Asks Ax for Priests For Immorality

Nazi No. 1 Jew-Baiter Urges Guillotine for 'Sinners in Sacred Garb.'

By the United Press.

Nuernberg, Germany, June 21.—Julius Streicher, fanatic Nazi editor and Germany's No. 1 Jew-baiter, tonight plunged into the Nazi-Catholic feud with a demand that priests convicted of immorality be executed on the guillotine.

Streicher, leader of the Nazis in the Nuernberg district, announced his demand before 200,000 persons assembled at a summer solstice celebration yesterday, but it was not until tonight that his speech was made public.

"It is tragic," he said, "that those who talk so much about sin are the incarnation of sin in sacred garb."

Streicher revealed, for the first time, that it was he who was to have been killed by Helmuth Hirsch, 21-year-old American citizen who died on a Nazi guillotine in Ploetzensee Prison June 4.

Hirsch, whose United States citizenship was revealed after his arrest, was convicted of "plotting against an official of the German state."

There were rumors at the time, although never confirmed, that he plotted to kill Chancellor Adolf Hitler.

Munich, Germany, June 21 (AP).—The Nazi regime tonight announced that new immorality trials of Catholics would show justification for its drastic action against Catholic schools in Bavaria.

Adolf Wagner, Bavarian minister of the interior who yesterday announced the closing of 11 private Catholic schools, declared the public would know the reason for this "when the trials begin."

Wagner also ordered transformation of 966 parochial schools into secular institutions. Hundreds of thousands of school children in Bavaria, long the German stronghold of Catholicism, were affected.

In Berlin, Germany's propaganda

Farley Facing Questioning on C.I.O. Mail Case

Will Be Asked to 'Explain' to Senate Committee, Says Bridges.

By Sidney Olson.

Postmaster General James A. Farley will be called before the Senate Postoffice Committee Thursday and "invited to explain why C. I. O. pickets dominate mail service in the strike areas," Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire, said last night.

Senator Bridges' action in demanding that Farley appear was based on the assumption that Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, committee chairman, will call a session of the committee Thursday.

McKellar said last night: "I expect to call the committee for Thursday, but a definite announcement will be impossible until tomorrow." He added significantly: "I think Jim Farley can take care of himself."

McKellar also indicated that at the first opportunity he will try to clear up confusion surrounding the committee's ramified investigations by moving that the Bridges and Guffey resolutions be turned over to the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee for action.

The inquiry began under the Bridges resolution seeking an investigation of reports of mail interference in strike areas.

Another committee member, Senator Joseph F. Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, countered with a resolution that the steel companies be investigated.

McKellar's move will be, in his view, an effort to shift the investigations thus far instituted to the proper committee, be it the Civil Liberties Committee, which has been actively examining witnesses and taking testimony in Chicago on the Memorial Day mass shooting of marching workers by the Chicago police, or some other committee to be appointed.

The witness schedule for Thurs-

Governor Acts to Keep Status Quo; President Joins Board's Plea.

Mediation Fails; Steel Chiefs Quit

C. I. O. Leader Assails Girdler; Soldiers to Disarm Civilians.

Troops were poured into the strife-torn Mahoning Valley of Ohio last night as Gov. Martin L. Davey, acting in the face of collapse of Federal peace efforts and a dynamite-laden back-to-work movement, sought to prevent new violence in the steel strike.

At the same time President Roosevelt was making a personal appeal by telegraph to steel company officers to abandon announced plans to reopen strike-closed mills early today.

Whether the action had come in time to prevent the violence feared as a result of the steel companies' earlier-announced decision to reopen the plants at 7 a. m. remained in doubt.

Brig. Gen. Gilson D. Light, at Youngstown, notified his superiors early this morning, however, that all pickets had been called from the strike-affected steel mills there by John Owens, Ohio C. I. O. strike director.

The dramatic moves came at the end of a day that had seen the steel concerns refuse to sign contracts with John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization. The C. I. O. demand for signed contracts is the crux of the seven-State strike.

Peace Parley Fails.

The unyielding stand of the steel officials resulted in the breakdown of peace efforts of the President's three-man mediation board.

Tom Girdler, chairman of Republic Steel, flatly informed the board:

"Republic cannot and will not enter into a contract, oral or written, with an irresponsible party, and the C. I. O., as presently constituted, is utterly irresponsible."

Eugene Grace, president of Bethlehem Steel; Frank Purnell, president of Youngstown Sheet & Tube, and Wilfred Sykes, assistant to the president of Inland Steel, took a similar stand.

Then the steel executives packed up and went home. A spokesman for them said they had no intention of returning.

Lewis Assails "Butchery."

A swift-moving series of events followed.

Lewis, summoned before the board and notified of the steel concerns' decision, issued a statement to reporters.

Union leaders believe, he said, that somewhere in the country there is "authority to stop this contemplated butchery in these mill districts—that somewhere there should be a power to restrain this madman Girdler."

Then Lewis telephoned Gov. Davey and Secretary of Labor Perkins and requested them to stop the "butchery" he said might ensue should Republic Steel and Youngstown Sheet & Tube attempt to re-

Officer, Fireman Hurt, 5 Arrested After Chase Here

A fireman and a motorcycle policeman were injured and five persons were taken into custody after an auto chase through downtown streets early today.

It began at New Jersey avenue and H streets northwest, where Motorcycle Policemen H. W. Carmichael and A. J. Kaskeski, overtook a speeding car and instructed the occupants to follow them to the precinct station. At F street the car turned right, away from the police, and the chase was on.

When the speeding car reached Twelfth street, the driver swerved sharply and the automobile turned completely around. All were taken into custody at this point but one, who left the car and started running with Kaskeski in pursuit.

Fireman Jesse M. Jamison, president of the Fire Fighters Association, off duty at the time, took up the pursuit at this point and as he was about to overtake the fleeing man, was attacked, police said, with a blackjack or a butt of a gun.

Head of Georgian Soviet State Removed; More Trials Hinted

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, June 21.—G. A. Mgaloblishvili, premier of the Georgian Soviet Republic, Joseph Stalin's homeland, was removed from office today.

An official announcement merely said he was being transferred to other work.

Important new treason trials also were indicated to be in store for the Soviet as another high party official joined the list of those apparently imprisoned in the sweeping purification of party ranks.

Josef Stanislavovitch Umschlicht, acting secretary of the union executive committee, whose position was equivalent to the Speakership of the United States House of Representatives, was revealed to have disappeared June 16.

Similar disappearances in recent months have preceded the placing of treason charges against numerous Russian leaders, but there was no hint of what accusation might be made against the secretary.

Umschlicht, a Pole by birth, was a member of the powerful central committee of the Communist Party and stood close to the top of governmental structure as secretary of the committee of the presidency.

The hint of important new trials, following closely the trial and execution of eight high army leaders, was made by Prosecutor Andrey Vishinsky in an article published by a magazine.

New evidence incriminating enemies of the people who have yet to face the courts was uncovered in the recent military trial, Vishinsky asserted.

Discovery of a new band of saboteurs was reported from the Crimea where the former commissar of social welfare, A. K. Ziumbilova, and a woman were arrested on charges of embezzlement.

5 Die, 6 Wounded As Strikes Cripple Trinidad Oil Field

Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, June 21 (AP).—Five persons were dead and 26 known wounded tonight as authorities pushed the greatest mobilization of police and volunteers on this island in 34 years to cope with a wave of sit-down strikes in Trinidad oil fields.

Two workmen and a boy were killed today when police fired on a crowd of striking United British Oil Co. employes. Twenty persons were wounded.

The shootings came after workmen paraded through San Fernando streets, disrupting all work.

J. Uriah Butler, a colored labor organizer, was the object of one of the island's most intensive manhunts after Saturday's riots, which cost two lives. Arrival of police to arrest Butler on charges of agitation precipitated a seven-hour battle in which two police officers were killed.

Green Says C. I. O. Is Turning Public Against Workers

By the Associated Press.

President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, in a letter to Representative John Luecke, Escanaba, Mich., expressed concern yesterday over the public's reaction to recent Michigan strikes.

Green's letter answered one from Luecke addressed to Green and John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization. Luecke had urged the two leaders to unite their organizations and provide "tried" leadership for newly organized labor groups. Lewis has not replied.

"Like you, I have been apprehensive over what has been taking place in the C. I. O. organization movement," Green wrote Luecke.

"An evil influence has caused groups of newly-organized workers connected with the C. I. O. to follow a destructive policy. As a result, public opinion is turning against them."

Sit-Down Strike Held Illegal In First Ruling by U. S. Court

By the United Press.

Philadelphia, June 21.—A sit-down strike "is not in fact a strike" and therefore is illegal, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals ruled today in the first decision of its kind by a Federal tribunal.

In an unanimous decision of three judges, the court ordered immediate eviction of 256 sit-down strikers who have occupied the Apex Hosiery Co. plant here since May 6.

Judge J. Warren Davis wrote the decision which was concurred in by Judge Joseph Buffington, senior member of the court, and District Judge Oliver B. Dickinson, sitting on the circuit bench.

The ruling held that sit-down strikers violated both the Wagner labor act and the Sherman anti-trust act.

"Underlying this case is the question of whether a few lawless individuals ignoring and condemning the Wagner act in defiance of all law and order, and in ruthless disregard of the rights of others, should be permitted, by assuming the name of a union, to deprive all others of their means of livelihood and compel them to contribute of their earnings to self-styled leaders," the decision said.

The circuit court directed the case to be returned to Federal District Judge William H. Kirkpatrick, who refused ten days ago to grant an injunction against the strikers, members of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, an affiliate of the John L. Lewis Committee for Industrial Organization. Judge Kirkpatrick was ordered to issue an injunction for the ousting of the strikers immediately.

Sylvan H. Hirsch and Arno B. Mowitz, attorneys for the company, said they would allow the strikers 24 hours to leave the plant peaceably.

Ten Democrats Decline Bids to Roosevelt Rally

Sen. Holt, 8 Others Refusing Invitations Are Court Plan Foes.

At least ten Democratic Senators will be among those not present at the Jefferson Islands Club Democratic rally round the President on Chesapeake Bay this week-end.

But no dividing line between the Adminsitration sheep and the Administration goats was apparent last night either between those who were invited or those who will go to the three-day party reunion.

True, nine of the ten who will not attend the outing are outstanding opponents of the President's court plan, but some of these had out-of-town speaking appointments and others had prior engagements.

Only one Senator flatly stated he had no other plans, but for personal reasons desired not to be present. He was Senator Rush D. Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, bitter opponent of the Administration and of the President on nearly every issue.

Against Being "Acquired."

"No, I'm not going, because I can't swim," Holt laughed. "You know, there's an old Roman custom—first feast them and then acquire them. And I don't want to be acquired."

But Holt received an invitation, and so did every other Democrateic member of House and Senate.

"As you know," the invitation concluded, "the Jefferson Islands Club was established as a haven where Democrats could meet in congenial surroundings, for rest and recreation and for the mutual exchange of ideas on problems of interest to all of us."

Among those who stated their intention to attend the Demicratic peace rally were some Senators openly hostile to the President. Some of these planned to make the excursion together in little groups, chatted gaily "off the record" about their intentions and appeared to regard the outing as a lark.

Even the most loyal Administration Senators speculated on the likely nature of the conclave, and possible subjects to be discussed. Others expressed bewilderment at the purpose behind it all.

Amonk those not attending will be one of the President's closest followers—Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, a friend of the court plan, who previously had arranged to be present at the wedding of a neice.

Senator Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska, one of the leaders in the fight for the President's court plan, had scheduled a debate on the court issue in Cleveland, Ohio, Friday night, and will send his regrets.

Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, who yesterday vigorously denounced the Administration's fiscal and relief policies in the Senate, will not be present.

Senators having "prior engagements" included Peter G. Gerry, of Rhode Island, who will be visiting in North Carolina; A. Harry Moore, of New Jersey, who will be addressing the Elks, in Union City, N. J.; Walter F. George, of Georgia, and Royal S. Copeland, of New York.

O'Connor Going Away.

Among the House leaders, Representatives John J. O'Connor, of New York, chairman of the House Rules Committee, will not be able to attend because he is leaving Thursday to be present at his son's graduation from Exeter.

A few House Democrats plainly indicated they were not going for "personal" reasons.

Representative Martin L. Sweeney, of Ohio, told reporters "no amount of eating, drinking or fishing can change my mind on the court plan or any other plan."

"My dear Senator," a typical invitation read.

"It is a great pleasure for me in my capacity as president of the Jefferson Island Club—a shrine for Democrats—to invite you to attend one of the three 'stag' parties to be given by the club during the week-end beginning Friday, June 25 * * *

 * * We are issuing the invitation so that one-third of the Democratic members of the Senate and House may be guests of the club each day, beginning Friday, June 25, and extending over Saturday and Sunday * * *"

Steelman to Head Labor Mediators

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins last night announced appointment of John R. Steelman, of Alabama, as director of the conciliation service of the Department of Labor to succeed the late Hugh L. Kerwin.

Steelman was appointed a commissioner of conciliation under Kerwin in 1933 and has handled industrial disputes in practically every State. He was born at Thornton, Ark., in 1900, and is a veteran of the World War.

Jury Picked to Try 2 As U. S. Agent's Killers

Topeka, Kans., June 21 (AP).—A jury which will be asked to send two paroled New York convicts to the gallows for the slaying of a Federal agent was selected today.

S. S. Alexander, United States district attorney, told the jury the defendants, Robert Suhay and Glen Applegate, orally confessed their part in the gun battle at the Topeka Postoffice April 16 in which agent Wimberly W. Baker was wounded fatally while seeking to arrest the two as suspects in a Katonah, N. Y., bank robbery.

Clash With Roosevelt Would Have Caused Robinson to Quit—If U. S. Were France.

By Franklyn Waltman

WALTMAN.

IF Washington, D. C., were Paris, France, Senate Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson today would resign his leadership and President Roosevelt, in all probability, would designate Senator Alben W. Barkley, the Paducah, Ky., orator, to take over the job.

Senator Robinson precipitated an issue over the burden which local governments should assume in relieving distress—and he lost. Under the rules of a parliamentary government, the laurels—and the responsibility of carrying on—go to the victor. But this is not Paris, and Senator Robinson will remain the Democratic leader of the Senate. We do not take these things as seriously as do our French and British cousins.

Nevertheless, Senator Robinson's prestige has been hurt. For the first time in four years he has chosen to cross swords openly with the Roosevelt Administration, and he hardly can be pleased with the outcome. He was able to rally to his side only 21 of his 75 Democratic colleagues. Exactly two Democrats opposed the Robinson proposal for every one who supported it. Such a performance hardly threatens President Roosevelt's hold on the Senate.

* * * *

The big question of the day around Washington consequently is this: Why did Senator Robinson strike off on this tack against the Administration? There is no official answer, but there is a great deal of speculation, not only downtown but in corridors, private offices and cloakrooms on Capitol Hill.

One suggestion is that the Democratic leader has become impatient over the President's delay in naming him to the Supreme Court vacancy or giving assurance he would be appointed, and that Senator Robinson decided to demonstrate to the White House how troublesome he might become.

Another suggestion is that Senator Robinson has been given to understand he will not be named to the Supreme Court unless he can get the Senate to pass a compromise Supreme Court reorganization bill and that he has found this impossible—and therefore is beginning to wreak revenge on the President.

Still another suggestion is that Senator Robinson has joined what is vaguely called the "Garner revolt," has turned sour on the President and along with a cabal of Southern Senators has undertaken to put Mr. Roosevelt in his place and thus dominate the party on the eve of the 1940 convention.

There also are variations of these suggestions offered. None, however, seem very plausible or convincing. Certainly if it were the Robinson plan to teach the President a lesson, it has been a boomerang. The net result of this relief episode is to demonstrate that on certain types of issues—one of which is relief—Mr. Roosevelt is invulnerable.

None will deny Joe Robinson is one of the most astute political maneuverers and seers on Capitol Hill. He knows better than most that relief is a dangerous issue on which to pick a quarrel with the President. He knew, in fact, last Friday when he made his surprising speech that he had hold of a losing issue. Had he wished to break with the Administration he certainly would not have picked the relief question as a springboard.

But much of this speculation falls flatly to earth in face of the fact Senator Robinson took his stand on this relief question more than a month ago—before the Van Devanter vacancy on the Supreme Court materialized and before Garner packed up his bags and went home.

The Senator made clear his attitude in the White House conference before the President sent his relief message to Congress in April. On that occasion, along with Senator Byrnes and others, he indicated his chagrin that Mr. Roosevelt had done little to trim the sails of his relief plans, and he let Senator Byrnes understand he could count on his help to do what the President had not done.

The most plausible and logical explanation of Senator Robinson's action, therefore, is that he sincerely believes the time has come to place a curb on relief expenditures and had the courage to voice this conviction. It is only because there is so little sincerity in the New Deal that an explanation is sought in other directions.

The Robinson attitude is evidence of the restlessness which is developing among formerly blind and ardent followers of the New Deal. Later on the movement may assume wider proportions. But it is ridiculous at this time to take too seriously talk of a breach between Senator Robinson and the White House and of a cabal of Senators wrecking Mr. Roosevelt's program. As things now stand, the only Roosevelt proposal which faces defeat is the Supreme Court proposal. By exerting the necessary pressure, Mr. Roosevelt can get the remainder of his program when he wants it.

And it is much too early for the Kentuckians to start holding mint julep parties in celebration of a new Senate floor leader. Senator Barkley will learn there is more than one obstacle between him and the Senate leadership.

Out of this episode, however, emerges the serious and important fact that virtually nothing will now be done along lines of economy by this session of Congress and that as far as the relief outlay is concerned nothing will be done about it until the President takes the initiative. When that will be, heaven only knows.

New Air Rules May Compel Closing of Washington Field

Enlargement or abandonment of the Washington Airport and of the projected Gravelly Point airfield may be required by a new set of regulations, soon to be issued by the Department of Commerce, it was learned yesterday.

The result of a study which has been in progress for several months, the regulations are expected to require longer runways and better approaches to the airfields used by transport companies. Airfield runways of 3,000 or 3,500 feet may have to be lengthened to 4,000 or 5,000 feet, if tests in progress find this necessary.

The proposed changes would either require that Washington Airport be enlarged by filling in the Boundary channel, and abandoning Military road, both of which projects have been opposed by War Department authorities, or that the airfield be abandoned except for use by local traffic.

The regulations also would require the amendment of present plans for the Gravelly Point airport.

Safety Emphasized.

Indications are safety will be stressed in the forthcoming report. Hazards to air navigation, such as telegraph poles, overhead wires, and trees are scheduled for elimination, officials said.

Although the department refused to forecast the exact form the regulations may take, it was pointed out that sufficient authority exists to enforce new safety standards.

A classification of airfields of the country will result from the investigation.

Standards will be set by the department, but aviation interests will be expected to force the modernization of airports, or to provide new fields.

Prime features in the classification of airports, it was said, will be the accessibility of the field, its freedom from obstructions, and facilities it furnishes for handling freight and passenger traffic.

When the regulations have been promulgated, a reasonable time will be allowed airport owners and transport interests to meet new requirements.

Officials said studies have been carried on at important airports, and on all the principal airlines. In 60 or 90 days, it was indicated, the Government will be in possession of enough material to set the standards for all airports which are to be used by transport ships.

Duke and Bride Return To Old Viennese Haunts

Vienna, Austria, June 21 (AP).—The light-hearted Duke and Duchess of Windsor returned tonight to the Viennese night clubs which they enjoyed last year on a vacation cruise before their marriage. The couple lunched at the British Legation, went shopping during the afternoon and then went dancing. Chatting gaily, they danced to old Viennese tunes and to American jazz during visits to restaurants and night clubs.

$12,000 Salvage Value Of Costly Hindenburg

New York, June 21 (AP).—The skeleton of the great dirigible Hindenburg which cost millions to construct will salvage for only $4,000 to $12,000, A. J. Smith, of United States Aviation Underwriters, Inc., said today. The amount realized will be determined by the weight of pure aluminum recovered in melting the alloy. Estimates of the tonnage vary from 25 to 50 tons. The Hindenburg burned at Lakehurst, May 6, with loss of 36 lives.

Guard Liberty, Hughes Warns Brown Alumni

Capital Students, National Leaders Given Degrees at Providence.

Providence, R. I., June 21 (AP).—Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes today asserted that society's principal problem at present is the preservation of democratic institutions.

Speaking before the annual alumni meeting of Brown University, the Chief Justice said freedom of learning and speech, freedom of the press and assembly and freedom of conscience are "the essential buttresses of democratic institutions."

"Our first duty is to preserve these freedoms—of learning, of speech, of press, of assembly, of conscience—and be alert to detect the slightest attempt to impair them," he said, "but our confidence will prove illusory if those who are foremost in the enjoyment of these privileges are not keenly conscious of their responsibility."

Democracy Imperilled.

Hughes, pointing out that confused national and international conditions had been produced by the economic upsets resulting from the World War, questioned whether democracy would be able to survive the "pressure of" economic forces and insidious teachings of an alien philosophy."

He declared the security of democratic institutions was in the sentiment maintaining them rather than in existing constitutional provisions and warned against placing confidence in such framework of government, "however astutely contrived in the interest of liberty."

"This sentiment," he said, "is the result of many interacting forces, among which is the outstanding influence of our intellectual leaders who have had the special advantages of our educational establishments. Our colleges and universities sow the seed of which the Nation will reap the crop."

Hits Concealed Purposes.

The Chief Justice described as society's arch enemies those persons who seek to accomplish concealed purposes or a profit by misleading the public with "indirection, misstatement, understatement and slander."

Prior to his address, Chief Justice Hughes had seen his alma mater confer the honorary degree of doctor of laws on his son, Charles Evans Hughes, jr., and a bachelor of arts degree, magna cum laude, on his grandson, Charles Evans Hughes 3d. He also heard his grandson deliver one of the student orations at the commencement exercises.

Capital Residents Honored.

Four other prominent residents and former residents of Washington, all alumni of Brown University, received honorary degrees at the commencement exercises.

A doctor of laws degree was conferred on Dr. William A. Slade, Brown '98, chief reference librarian at the Library of Congress. Prof. Zechariah Chafee, jr., '07, formerly legal consultant for the United States Coal Commission and counsel for the National Committee on Law Observance and Enforcement, and Dr. W. Randolph Burgess, Brown '09, former acting chief of the statistics branch of the general staff, United States Army, were honored likewise.

The honorary degree of doctor of letters was conferred on Dr. Harris E. Starr, permanent editor of the Dictionary of American Biography, who as associate editor formerly worked in the staff's Washington office. John D. Rockefeller, chairman of the board of the Rockefeller Foundation, also received a Litt. D.

Those from this section who received diplomas include Paul F. Clements, son of William J. Clements, 1408 Maryland avenue northeast, a graduate of Devitt Preparatory School; Oliver W. Hayes, son of Mrs. Charles W. Hayes, Bethesda, Md., Sidwell Friends School; William J. Hickey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Hickey, 5738 Seventh street, who transferred to Brown from the University of Maryland; Andres A. Pastoriza, jr., a graduate of Silver Bay School, son of the Dominican Republic's minister to the United States and Mrs. Pastoriza, 2633 Sixteenth street, and Chester A. Slater, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Chester A. Slater, 5206 Fourteenth street, Central High School graduate.

San Diego, Calif., June 21 (AP).—Twelve giant Navy flying boats roared tonight toward the fleet air base at Coco Solo, Canal Zone, 3,000 miles away on the longest nonstop mass flight in United States naval history.

Rear Admiral Ernest J. King, commander of aircraft force, said he believed the flight would be completed within 24 hours. Almost the entire distance is over water, the route following the coast of Mexico and Central America.

Aboard were 12 officers and 60 enlisted men, with Lieut. Robert Morse in command.

Baldwin's Stand Wins £250,000

London, June 21 (AP).—An anonymous donor has given 250,000 pounds ($1,250,000) to the Empire as a tribute to the way Stanley Baldwin handled the abdication crisis, it was disclosed in Commons lobbies today.

The donor said he wanted to make a "thanks offering" for the former prime minister's "courageous, far-seeing and sympathetic handling of a supremely difficult situation, which averted incalculable dangers for the Empire."

The money was placed at the disposal of the premier's office for the purpose of "endowing any object best calculated to strengthen still further" the ties that bind the Empire.

2 Men Surrender On Fraud Charge

Two men charged with using the mails to defraud were en route to Wilmington, Del., last night after they surrendered to United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage here yesterday.

The men, Morris Kramer and Frank Bramwell, were indicted in Delaware last year and have been sought since. They are alleged to have solicited money for worthless stock through the mails.

Yesterday they pleaded not guilty and waived preliminary hearing. Commissioner Needham C. Turnage held Bramwell under $3,500 and his companion under $1,500 when both agreed to return to Wilmington for trial.

Roosevelt 'View' On Liquor Fought

Los Angeles, June 21 (AP).—President Roosevelt was criticized for "liquor attitudes and activities that should be rigorously condemned by the church" in a report approved today by Southern California Methodist Conference delegates.

A bitter fight was lost to eliminate the President's name from the temperance, prohibition and public morals report.

As adopted, the report, presented by Dr. A. L. Baker, stated "every promise concerning control of liquor traffic and nonreturn of the saloon made by Franklin D. Roosevelt, the candidate and President, has been broken, and at his doors we can lay the tragedy of broken lives, despoiled homes and suffering of little children."

House Passes Substitute Rail Pension Plan

1,200,000 Are Cheered; U. S. Acts to Halt Express Strike.

While 1,200,000 railroad workers throughout the country were cheered yesterday by House passage of the substitute rail pension act, Chairman James J. Carmalt, of the National Mediation Board, was attempting to block a strike of 40,000 rail express workers.

George M. Harrison, president of the Brotherhod of Railway Clerks, of which the express employes are members, had notified L. O. Head, president of the express company, that unless the one remaining point at issue is settled a strike will be called. The point involves a small wage adjustment for some workers in New York, though the general controversy was over the union's seeking a reduction in working hours with no cut in pay.

The railway labor act, under which the National Mediation Board has stepped into the controversy, authorizes the board, in case it fears any substantial interruption of interstate commerce as a result of such a dispute, to notify President Roosevelt. The President then is authorized to appoint a special board to investigate the controversy, a course the President has twice followed this year with success.

The special board is given 30 days to file a report, suggesting a solution, and for 30 days thereafter, the law provides, there shall be no strike or other change in the conditions from which the dispute arose.

The House vote on the rail pension bill, designed to take the place of the old law which the carriers have under fire in the courts, was 360 to 1, only Representative O'Connell (Democrat), Montana, being recorded against it.

Representative Crosser (Democrat), Ohio, co-author with Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, of the bill, said railroad executives, who had worked out the bill in conference with union heads, had agreed not to fight the new measure.

At the same time, the House Ways and Means Committee approved the substitute bill imposing payroll taxes on both roads and employes to finance the pension. The tax rates start at 2¾ per cent each on the roads and workers, and increases to 3¾ per cent by 1949. The old law, which had been enjoined by the carriers, set the rate for each at 3½ per cent.

Pensions ranging up to $120 a month are provided.

$50,000,000 Bill To Enlarge Navy Wins Approval

The House Naval Committee approved yesterday a $50,000,000 auxiliary ship construction program designed to bring the Navy to its highest point of efficiency in years.

At the same time, the legislators heard Rear Admiral Arthur B. Cook, chief of the Navy's bureau of aeronautics, outline plans for building up the naval air service.

Cook disclosed the Navy was studying extension of existing naval air stations and planned some "exploratory" work in Alaska this summer from a base at Sitka. He linked this work with possible establishment of an aviation base in the Aleutian Islands.

The auxiliary construction program, already approved in slightly different form by the Senate, would authorize the building of six vessels, including three tenders for seaplanes, submarines and destroyers, an oiler, a fleet tug and a mine sweeper.

Illness Prevents Navy Commission For Roosevelt, Jr.

Cambridge, Mass., June 21 (U.P.).—Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., son of the President, will not receive his commission as ensign in the United States Naval Reserve Officers' Training Corps on graduating from Harvard University, it was learned today.

Because of prolonged illness last winter, young Roosevelt was unable to pass the physical examination that would have entitled him to receive the commission with 40 other members of Harvard's naval science class at commencement exercises Thursday.

More Cash Needed By Insured Banks

Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation officials reported yesterday between 2,000 and 3,000 of the 14,000 insured banks have less capital than is deemed desirable by the F. D. I. C.

These officials emphasized this did not indicate the banks were unsound, but said it probably would be desirable for them to increase capital as insurance against possible adverse conditions. The F. D. I. C. insures their deposits in full up to $5,000.

Of all assets of insured banks, the authorities said, about 10 per cent could not be converted into cash immediately. They added this does not mean the assets are not basically sound.

D. C. Watched After $12,806 Holdup in Va.

4 Bandits Rob Power Firm Cashiers on Richmond Trolley.

Police of two States and the District last night, armed with submachine guns and sawed-off shotguns, guarded the entrances of roads leading to the Capital following a bold daylight robbery in Richmond, Va.

The daring quartet of bandits boarded a street car in the Virginia capital, covered two Virginia Electric & Power Co. cashiers, a motorman and 15 passengers with pistols, and escaped with $12,806.23 in cash and checks totaling $66.11, according to the Associated Press.

V. L. Lowe, the motorman, said the bandits jumped into a waiting sedan, with a fifth man at the wheel, and sped away.

Power company officials said the holdup men overlooked $2,300 in small change in five small bags in their haste. The major portion of the funds, which the cashiers were carrying from the car barn to a bank for deposit, was in a satchel, which the men grabbed and fled.

Major Price, a colored porter who was accompanying the cashiers, T. F. Green and his brother, J. W. Green, as a guard, was struck on the head with a blackjack, Lowe said, when the colored man hesitated to comply with a command to "Stick 'em up."

Two of the bandits boarded the street car a short distance from the point of the robbery, while three others rode alongside in a car until the street car stopped, the motorman said. Then two from the car and the two already inside drew pistols, herded the passengers, cashiers and motorman to the rear, grabbed the satchel and jumped into the automobile.

Lowe and W. C. Satterwhite, a bystander, said the car was a blue sedan, carrying Virginia license 52-198.

The holdup was one of the most daring daylight robberies in the State capital since Robert Mais and Walter Legenza and their confederate Misunas, held up a Federal Reserve bank truck at Broad Street Station and escaped with a sack of canceled checks, after shooting down the driver.

Meanwhile, local police posted armed details on all the bridges leading into the city from the South.

Park Police placed a cruiser containing two men on the Memorial Bridge. They were armed with machine guns and sawed-off shotguns.

SEC Indorses Bill Regulating Security Units

By the Associated Press.

The Securities Commission sent to Congress yesterday an indorsement of the Lea bill to regulate committees representing owners of securities in financially embarrassed corporations.

Commissioner William O. Douglas, who directed the study of such protective and reorganization committees which began in 1934, said today's 605-page report "can be summarized in one sentence."

"It recommends application to protective and reorganization committees of the simple and ancient idea that 'no man can serve two masters,'" he said.

The bill of Representative Lea (Democrat), California, Douglas asserted, would prevent the management, bankers and lawyers of a corporation from dominating committees formed to represent holders of the corporation's securities.

The measure also would bar members of such committees from speculating in the securities of the corporation involved and from profiting from contracts and jobs of the committees and would require review by the courts or some other independent agency of the salaries or fee that committee members pay themselves.

The Securities Commission suggested deposit agreements, under which committees take possession of the securities of the persons they represent, be rewritten to lessen the authority of committee members over the security owners and to make the committee members liable for abuse of their powers.

Harrisburg, June 21 (A.P.).—J. W. Lindau, jr. of North Carolina, notified Gov. George H. Earle today he was raising a $2,000,000 fund in the Southern States "to prevent" Earle's "possible nomination in 1940" as President of the United States.

Lindau listed himself as from North Carolina, gave no city in that State, but said he was also a resident of New York City.

The telegram, announced by Earle, commented on his "support of that violent and murderous minority of 3,000 strikers in Johnstown."

Basques Make Stand on Road To Santander

Hope to Save City From Bilbao's Fate; Assert Refugees Bombed.

By the Associated Press.

Banos de Carranza, Spain, June 21.—The Basque government gathered troops for a last stand on native soil tonight to save Santander from the fate of Bilbao as insurgent warplanes and vessels at sea heavily bombarded coastal areas.

Insurgents, seeking to force Basque President Jose Antonio Aguirre and the remnants of his army to abandon their homeland, bombed this small sulphur bath town near the border of Santander Province, causing considerable damage.

The government, however, continued to reorganize troops in an effort to check an insurent advance on Santander, about 45 miles west of Bilbao.

Refugees Clog Defense.

Basque resistance to the new insurgent push was hampered by thousands of refugees who fled toward Santander from the conquered capital.

Basques consolidated their weary and hungry forces a few miles west of Bilbao in the vicinity of Baracaldo and Alonsotegui and in this town on the Bilbao-Santander Railway line.

The Basque government charged in a statement that insurgents had bombed and machine-gunned the refugees, causing heavy casualties.

Basque officials said abandonment of Bilbao was ordered because it was impossible to continue the struggle without aid of an air force, which they vainly hoped would be sent by the Spanish government at Valencia.

Senate Rejects Robinson Plan On 25-75 WPA are allocated to the banks and the banks are compelled to take the bonds for they have been maneuvered into a position where they cannot refuse to take future issues because they must protect the enormous amount of Federal securities which already hold, and a reduction of 10 per cent under the par value of Federal securities would practically bankrupt 90 per cent of the banks of this country."

Glass spoke after Senator Barkley had denounced the Robinson amendment. The Kentuckian pictured Uncle Sam as a "Shylock" under the Robinson plan, exacting his pound of flesh from local communities, and expressed thanks for "a leader who is sufficiently adventuresome not to be afraid to plow through new ground" in solution of problems.

"I do not think we have yet gotten out of the vale of tears," Glass commented caustically. "I think the Senate has been treated to more lachrymose rhetoric than ever before in the history of the Republic. I individually think that more economic blunders if not in some instances economic crimes have been perpetrated by Congress in the name of starving people who never starve and freezing people, not one of whom has ever frozen than the imagination can conjure up."

The Virginian, without naming Lynchburg, referred to his own community, "one of the richest towns in the State of Virginia, whose bonds sell 'way above par," and said it was a "disgrace" it should borrow Federal money to construct sewers and sidewalks. He did not name Hopkins, but said "$7,000,000,000 are turned over to a man who never had any real business connections to distribute as he may please at his discretion."

Glass insisted the people should be made tax-conscious, but Senator Borah, also supporting the Robinson amendment, said "everybody outside of an insane asylum" ought to be made tax-conscious at the present time. Borah said he was backing the Robinson plan because he thought it would bring some degree of economy in relief. The Idahoan said the Supreme Court's recent social security decisions have caused the greatest economic change in the history of the country, placing complete responsibility upon Congress in taxing and spending.

"If the brakes are not put on here, there is no place where they can be put on," said Borah.

Winifred Maddux Recovering Here From Cat's Bite

Miss Winifred Maddux, 25-year-old daughter of Mrs. Raymond Belmont, society leader and sportswoman, of Middleburg, Va., was recovering yesterday in Emergency Hospital from an infection caused by the bite of a cat.

Physicians reported her condition improved. The bite was inflicted about 10 days ago, and she was brought from her Virginia estate about a week ago after the infection became pronounced.

She has been attended constantly by day and night nurses. Miss Maddux has lived in Middleburg since her mother, the former Mrs. May Hurling Maddux, married Raymond Belmont.

Miss Maddux was a witness in the investigation following the Christmas Eve murder of Mrs. Spencer Ilsley, Warrenton horsewoman. She was the last person to see Mrs. Ilsley alive.

G. O. P. Offers Substitute for Pay-Hour Bill

Bridges Submits Plan; Senate Group Reports Child Labor Amendment.

By William V. Nessly.

A Republican substitute for the Administration's wage-and-hour legislation pending now before Congress was offered last night by Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire, just after another Republican's substitute for the pending child labor amendment to the Constitution was favorably reported by the Senate Judiciary Committee unanimously.

Senator Bridges, in a radio address, bitterly criticized the pending wage-hour bills as discriminatory and destructive of collective bargaining. Main provisions of legislation he suggested "after conferences with other Republicans" would be:

1. Congress would set a national standard of 40 hours per week for all industry in interstate commerce and all intrastate commerce competing with it.

2. Any company would be permitted to work 58 hours a week by paying time and one-quarter up to 44 hours and time and one-half beyond 44 hours. Highly seasonal industries, working no more than 26 weeks a year, could operate "even 50 hours a week or longer" without overtime, the hours and rates to be fixed by overtime.

3. Congress would fix a national standard of 40 cents per hour for all, without any board which under the Black bill could reduce this rate to 30 cents or 20 cents or exempt industries or units in any industry."

Limit on Relief Wages.

4. Determination whether sectional wage differentials should be permitted would be left to Congress. The extent of such differentials would be left to the Department of Labor, with certain restrictions.

5. Wages on work relief projects would be limited to 80 per cent of the minimum rate fixed under the law, to prevent "disruption of industry * * * found at present in many sections * * * as a result of relief wages higher than wages in regular employment."

The substitute child labor amendment by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, is designed to take the place of the one still before the State Legislatures 13 years after its submission, in which time it has been ratified by only 28 of the 36 States required to make it effective.

It would forbid only employment "for hire" of children under 16 years, instead of 18 years as in the previous amendment. It does not confer on Congress power to "regulate" child labor, one of the chief causes of attack on the old amendment. Section one forbids child labor, and the only other section reads:

"The power of the several States is unimpaired by this article except that the operation of State laws shall be suspended to the extent necessary to give effect to legislation enacted by Congress."

Urges Labor to Protest.

Bridges, attacking the Black-Connery bill, said the bill gives the board it creates authority to fix "the entire wage scale for all persons subject to the act."

"What becomes of collective bargaining?" he asked. "If the board is to fix the rates of pay, then at their discretion these five men may ignore the results of collective bargaining. Labor should rise up in protest against this outrageous imposition. The bill is a bare-faced attempt to strait-jacket both employers under the will and discretion of five men who may act arbitrarily and without responsibility."

He said the board will have power to vary the hour standard between industries and even between competing units within one industry. "Even worse," he added, "it can exempt any industry or any unit of any one industry" from the act. He said industries or competing units in an industry could thus be "destroyed."

Repeating an estimate that at least 100,000 persons would be added to the Federal pay roll by the bill, he asked, "Have we not reached the limit of bureaucracy already in this country?" He declared operation of the proposed board will cost "close to a half billion dollars annually."

He criticized as another "red herring" inclusion in the Administration bill of the ban on labor by children under 16 years, and called for enactment of his separate bill to eliminate child labor without an amendment, or adoption of one of the child labor amendments proposed by Senator Vandenberg, Senator Austin (Republican), Vermont, and Representative White (Republican), Ohio.

Charges "Smoke Screen."

"Don't be fooled by the smoke screen of the cuttle fish," Bridges said, adding that "this measure is the culmination of bureaucracy in the extreme and leads the way into 'planned economy' not only in hours and wages, but also in prices, production, quotas and employment."

Meanwhile, at hearings on the Administration bill, T. W. McCreary, general manager of the Phoenix Glass Co., Monaco, Pa., spoke for the 16-year limit on child labor instead of 18 years.

Oakland Crowd Cheers Soviet Flying Heroes

Moscow to New York Next Aim, Declares Pilot Chekaloff.

By the Associated Press.

Oakland, Calif., June 21.—Russia's three "top of the world" fliers, reported already visualizing another daring flight—Moscow to New York—arrived here tonight to be acclaimed by a crowd of 5,000 at the original goal of their 6,000-mile nonstop attempt.

By chartered plane they flew in from Vancouver, Wash., where murky weather halted them after a 5,300-mile hop during which they conquered Arctic hazards in pioneering an air channel from Russia to the United States.

Even as they were on the way here Arthur Tarlow, their interpreter, said at Portland that Valeri Chekaloff, the pilot who stuck by the controls during the more than 60-hour trip from Moscow to Vancouver, had said:

"Moscow to New York; that is our next goal."

Russian Flag Flown.

Flags of the United States and the Soviet Union waved side by side at a reception stand as the aviators stepped from the plane here.

They were welcomed by city and county officials of San Francisco and Oakland, chamber of commerce representatives and a delegation from the Communist Party bearing wreaths and bouquets of red roses.

Earlier at Portland the fliers had been given an impressive reception at which Ambassador A. A. Troyanovsky described them as made of the "stuff of Lindbergh," America's flying ace.

There Chekaloff's face flushed a deep red as pretty Dorothy Hardin, queen of Portland's rose festival, threw a wreath of roses about his neck.

The three fliers looked forward eagerly tonight to sightseeing the United States—but with an eye on promised new adventures in the skies.

"It is the desire of our government to have many flights of this nature," said Ambassador Troyanovsky.

At Vancouver Barracks, where they landed yesterday, completing a 5,300-mile nonstop flight from the Soviet capital, Pilot Valeri Chekaloff and his two companions turned over to Army and civilian officials the barograph of their flight.

After turning over the barograph, which records altitudes, takeoffs and landings, to the American officials of the National Aeronautic Association, Chekaloff, Alexander Beliakoff, the navigator, and Georgi Baibukoff, copilot, received the plaudits of the Army post.

The Ambassador said the fliers will proceed to Washington from Oakland and expect to spend a month in the United States studying American aviation.

Future flights will be based on the results of this one, the Ambassador said, and the single-motored red-winged monoplane, after being shipped back to Moscow, will be inspected there, the effects of the transarctic flight studied and the plane reassembled for further aerial research.

U. S. Arctics Bases Urged.

Moscow, June 21 (AP).—Russia's foremost Arctic authority today urged the United States to establish radio stations and air bases on the American side of the North Pole to help make regular transpolar air services a reality.

Prof. Otto J. Schmidt, who recently established the Soviet base near the North Pole, said similar action must be taken by the United States before airplanes can fly regularly across the Pole.

Schmidt, returning to the Russian mainland from his polar expedition, said the three Russian fliers who reached Vancouver, Wash., yesterday from Moscow had blazed the trail.

But, he added, the task of creating real transpolar air communications "will of course require the cooperation of the people of the United States for their own profit and the advantage of all humanity."

Schmidt and other members of his polar expedition reached Archangel today to receive a wild ovation.

Four men they had left behind in the polar observation camp celebrated completion of their first month there by telegraphing the Kremlin congratulations on the transpolar flight. It was May 21 that they were landed near the Pole for a year's stay.

Gen. J. I. Alekanis-Astroff, chief of the air service, said the North Pole base had contributed greatly to success of the flight to the United States.

"In a few years airplanes will not be rarities in northern latitudes," said the Red Star, organ of the army. "Dozens of planes will cross the Pole and help enlarge the economic and cultural ties between the two greatest powers on earth."

Joseph Stalin led high officials of the nation in telegraphing congratulations to Pilot Valery Chekaloff and his comrades at Vancouver.

M. M. Kazanovitch, vice commissar of defense industry, said, "our problem now is to build a series of comfortable passenger planes capable of flying the distance in half the time taken by Chekaloff."

Litvinoff Hails Achievement.

By the Associated Press.

Maxim M. Litvinoff, Soviet Russia's commissar for foreign affairs, hailed the Russian flight to the United States tonight as a reproof to "certain people" who use aviation for destruction.

In a cablegram addressed to the Soviet transpolar fliers through the Soviet Embassy here, Litvinoff declared:

"At the moment when the invention of the human mind—aviation—is issued by certain people who consider themselves European to destroy cities and villages and to kill men, women and children in order to impose by force on another European people a regime and ideology alien to them, your heroic achievement shows where the thoughts and efforts of the peace-loving peoples of the Soviet Union are directed.

"Furthermore I am glad that you linked both hemispheres by an airline across the Pole and opened up a new route from the Soviet Union to the United States.

"Thus you created a new cultural link and prepared the ground for friendly competition between the Soviet people and the people of the United States, who, themselves, can take pride in their brilliant achievements in aviation and polar exploration."

Anti-Lynching Bill Reported Favorably by Senate Group

By Russell Smith

The Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday reported the Wagner-Van Nuys antilynching bill, recommending its passage in a 13-to-3 committee vote.

The committee's action places on the Senate calendar proposed legislation which precipitated perhaps the most acrimonious House debate of the session, the debate on the Gavagan bill. This measure was adopted by the House, 277 to 119.

Prospects for a favorable Senate vote were regarded as the best in the history of such legislative campaigns, as evidenced by the fact that but three opposing votes could be mustered against it in the judiciary committee.

Still, acrimonious debate of a highly sectional nature appeared certain to ensue. This was reflected in the statement of Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas, to The Post last night:

"I will vote against it, just as I voted against it in the committee and just as I have voted against similar bills and spoken against them in the House and the Senate. There is no doubt most Southern Senators will do the same.

"Certainly, there is a possibility the bill will pass at this session. Any time a bill has but three votes against it in the judiciary committee, there is a possibility it will pass. But I am going to vote against it and make a speech against it."

Senator Van Nuys, who has repeatedly forecast passage, expects to call up the measure at the earliest possible date. He feels there is a diminished resentment on the part of Southern members, although Connally last night said he himself would not predict there would be no filibustering.

With Senators King (Democrat), of Utah, and McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, absent, the committee vote yesterday was announced by the clerk as follows:

For—Ashurst, of Arizona; Neely, of West Virginia; Van Nuys, of Indiana; Logan, of Kentucky; Dieterich, of Illinois; McGill, of Kansas; Hatch, of New Mexico; Burke, of Nebraska; O'Mahoney, of Wyoming—all Democrats; Norris, of Nebraska—Independent Republican; Austin, of Vermont, and Steiwer, of Oregon—Republicans.

Against—Pittman, of Nevada; Connally, of Texas—Democrats; Borah, of Idaho—Republican.

D.C. Woman's Body Is Found in Home; Autopsy Is Ordered

The body of Mrs. Anne Baldwin Niland, 67, of 1151 New Hampshire avenue northwest, was found yesterday afternoon sprawled on the floor near her bed. She was in night clothes and appeared to have a bruised lip. A chair in the room had been upset and the carpet partly turned over.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald, after viewing the body, said it "looked like death from natural causes."

Mrs. Niland lived alone on the first floor of the New Hampshire avenue house. Members of a family occupying an upper floor, upon returning home in the afternoon, noticed that Mrs. Niland's bottle of milk and morning newspaper had not been removed.

Pope and NRA Had Like Aims, Ryan Declares

Act Would Have Developed 'Industrial Order,' He Says in Address.

By the Associated Press.

Rockford, Ill., June 21.—The Right Rev. Mgr. John A. Ryan, of Washington, told the Institute of Human Relations tonight if the NRA had been permitted to continue it could have developed into the kind of industrial order recommended by Pope Pius XI.

In an address prepared for delivery at the meeting, sponsored by the Chicago round table of Jews and Christians, Mgr. Ryan, director of the department of social action of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, reviewed the attitude of his church toward social justice.

Referring to an encyclical by Pope Leo XIII of the industrial function of the state, Mgr. Ryan quoted, "Whenever the general interest, or any particular class, suffers or is threatened with injury which can in no other way be met or prevented, it is the duty of the public authority to intervene."

The speaker said this principle justified "all reasonable measures of protective labor legislation. It sanctions child labor laws, reduced hours laws, minimum wage laws, and legislation for insurance against sickness, old age and unemployment."

The principle of state intervention laid down by Pope Leo would justify, the Catholic sociologist said, "all the legislative measures that have been adopted by Congress since the advent of the New Deal."

Turning to the encyclical of Pope Pius, which Mgr. Ryan said was commonly designated as the "occupational groups system," he explained that the Pope did not advocate state ownership, but wanted "more, not less, genuine freedom for all individuals. Class conflict he would eliminate not by a futile effort to abolish classes, but by bringing them into a practical scheme of co-operation."

Two in Washington Felled by Humidity As Summer Opens

Yesterday was the first day of summer, and for the occasion the temperature in Washington rose 4 degrees to a high of 86 at 1 p. m. Worse than that, however, was the humidity, which was largely responsible for two cases of heat prostration.

Rain came in the afternoon and evening, but did not help the situation much.

Summer began officially at 3:12 p. m., at which time the sun arrived over the Tropic of Cancer. Uncomfortable as the day was, it was far from being the hottest of the year. The city experienced a temperature of 93 as far back as April 18.

Rufus Oliggan, 25, of 2028 Lee highway, Arlington, collapsed while working on a building under construction at 1320 Nicholson street northwest. He was treated at Emergency Hospital.

Dr. Ballou Awaits Kemp Case Ruling

Non residents who wish to enroll children in District public schools next fall may submit applications but their acceptance will depend on the decision of the District Court of Appeals in the Kemp case, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, schools superintendent, said yesterday.

An appeal was taken by the Corporation Counsel last fall from a District Court ruling that Lois Kemp, Arlington County resident and daughter of a PWA official employed here, could not be barred from continuing her studies in Gordon Junior High School.

Dr. Ballou declared he could not predict whether there will be a large number of applications next fall from nearby Virginians and Marylanders, in view of the Kemp decision.

Border Incidents Strain Russo-Japanese Amity

Hsinking, Manchukuo, June 21 (AP). Relations between Soviet Russia and Manchukuo and Japan were reported newly strained today by a series of border incidents.

The Domei (Japanese) news agency said a Soviet gunboat fired on Manchukuoan border patrols inspecting a district 20 miles west of Chike on the Amur River, which borders Siberia on the south. Other reports said 30 Russian soldiers invaded an islet in the Amur River 22 miles upstream from Chike and demanded that local inhabitants withdraw.

The meeting, which is open to members of the co-operative and their frineds, will begin at 8 p. m. Dinner will be served at 7 p. m. Reservations for the dinner must be made by tomorrow evening.

Fight Is Started On House Rise In Realty Tax

Capper Fires Opening Gun With Commissioners Standing Pat.

traditional thing when the Senate and House differ, it is more likely that the bill will strike a middle ground and that the final deficit may fall below $7,000,000.

The Commissioners at their first informal conference on the tax measure since it passed the House decided to ask the Senate District Committee to eliminate the chain store tax and restore Title 1, which would enable the District to obtain advances from the Federal Treasury.

They also agreed to ask the committee to add a provision authorizing a $15,000 survey of the entire taxation and fiscal problems of the District by experts.

This survey was proposed originally in the District supply bill as reported to the House, but it was stricken out on a point of order raised by members of the House District Committee.

The Commissioners took no action regarding the parking meter authorization, stricken out in the House, and they indicated they will not ask for its restoration in the Senate. The change in the inheritance tax was turned over to officials for study.

Possibility of restoring the $1,500,000 motor-vehicle weight tax revenue to the general fund was discussed, and Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, was authorized to confer with Representative Cartwright, chairman of the House Roads Committee, in an effort to ascertain whether such an allocation would prevent the District from getting $700,000 in Federal highway aid.

Cartwright said he could not answer the inquiry without some study, and legal experts at the Bureau of Public Roads, which allocates the funds under the Cartwright-Hayden act, said they could not decide without some research.

Want Federal Aid.

One official pointed out, however, that Congress would have passed both laws and that whatever its latest action might be would hold the advantage.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen stated that the District heads would not want to make the change if there is any danger of losing the chance of collecting Federal highway aid.

Were the motor vehicles weight tax to be placed in the general revenue fund, Hazen pointed out, a 1-cent increase in the gas tax would be necessary.

"Personally, I am for an increase in the gasoline tax and opposed to raising the realty tax rate," he said.

Under the original program proposed by the Commissioners to the House sub-committee, the motor-vehicle weight tax was placed in the general fund and a 1-cent gasoline tax was recommended to build up the highway fund.

Should the transfer be made, the total estimate of additional revenue would be raised to $11,750,000.

Belgian Premier May Discuss Debts

By the Associated Press.

The Capital speculated last night on the possibility Premier Paul Van Zeeland of Belgium might suggest some new formula of war debt settlement to President Roosevelt during his visit here tomorrow.

Mr. Roosevelt arranged tentatively to spend the afternoon with the 44-year-old financial and economic authority aboard the Presidential yacht Potomac.

They will have an opportunity to discuss not only the defaulted European war debts to this country but an "assignment" given Van Zeeland by the British and French governments with regard to restoration of normal trade relations among European nations.

Other artists and their awards, in order of winning, included:

Miss Fielding's design showed an eagle in flight, carrying an anchor in its claws, encircled by 21 stars, symbolic of the Presidential salute of 21 guns, all done in gold against a blue field.

The selection was made by a jury composed of Brig. Gen. Richard H. Jordan, U. S. A.; Admiral Adolphus Andrews, chief, Bureau of Navigation, U. S. Navy; Admiral R. R. Weesche, commandant, U. S. Lyons, president of the White House Photographers; Col. Edward M. Watson, military aide to the President; Richard S. Doyle, commodore, Capital Yacht Club, and Robert O. Scholz, treasurer, Corinthian Yacht Club.

Presiding at the award caucus was James A. Councilor, general chairman of the 1937 President's Cup Regatta, who was assisted by Arthur Dubois, official flag authority of the War Department, who acted as adviser to the judges.

Work on Flag Starts Soon.

Immediately after the winners were announced, Councilor ordered a manufacturer to begin work on the first flag, which will be flown tonight from the mast of the S. S. Potomac during the Gold Cup cruise. The flag will be run up to full staff by John A. Remon, chairman of the President's Cup Regatta Association, assisted by Miss Fielding and Councilor.

The Boys Club Band will play "Anchors Aweigh" during the flag-raising ceremony.

During the cruise, members of the newly organized Fo'c'sle Club will gather in the forecastle of the S. S. Potomac to hear returns of the Braddock-Louis fight by radio.

U. S. Offers $1,500 For Gang Capture

By the Associated Press.

The Justice Department announced yesterday a $1,500 reward for information leading to the arrest of the Alfred Brady gang which has operated in the Midwest for the past two years.

Director J. Edgar Hoover, of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, said Attorney General Cummings had offered the reward to spur the hunt for Brady and his two companions, James Dalhover and Clarence Lee Shaffer, jr.

They are wanted in Indiana on murder charges and are also sought for several bank robberies, Hoover said. He added that on May 25 Indiana State Policeman Paul Minneman was killed in a fight with the bandits who had robbed the Goodland Indiana State Bank of $2,500.

Davey Orders 4,800 Militia To Youngstown

Roosevelt Urges the Steel Heads to Keep Plants Closed; Parley Fails.

open their Youngstown, Ohio plants today.

At the same time Charles P. Taft 2d, chairman of the mediation board, telephoned Secretary Perkins and Gov. Davey. He requested the President to take some action that would help maintain the steel strike "status quo" pending further efforts to bring the warring factions together. He suggested Gov. Davey take whatever action he deemed necessary to maintain peace in the hotbeds of the strike.

Telegrams from President Roosevelt to the heads of Republic Steel and Youngstown Sheet & Tube were forthcoming immediately.

"The Secretary of Labor has advised me that the mediation board, of which Mr. Charles P. Taft is chairman, has requested you not to open your Youngstown plants tomorrow (Tuesday) morning. In the promotion of public safety and the interests of a reasonable and peaceful settlement which should be expected and can be attained, I earnestly join with the board in this request to you."

Simultaneously, Gov. Davey was ordering militia into Mahoning and Trumbull Counties, scene of the threatened clash between strikers and non-strikers.

To Disarm Civilians.

In his proclamation, declaring what he said was, in effect, martial law, the Governor cited a section of the Ohio constitution giving him power to "call forth the militia, execute the laws of the State to suppress insurrection and repel invasion."

In a statement accompanying the proclamation, the Governor said orders to the adjutant general provided that steel plants which are now operating shall continue to operate on the same basis as they have during the strike.

Steel plants which have been closed shall remain closed during the deliberations of the Federal Mediation Board, provided this period of time is reasonably limited. All persons who are not officers of the law shall be disarmed.

Davey said the adjutant general would send 4,800 troops into the area. This is nearly half Ohio's strength of 10,000 guardsmen. The troops are already on the move, he said.

Gov. Davey's action, he explained, was approved by President Roosevelt. He said he read his proclamation over the telephone to the President.

"The President said he thought it was fair and the proper procedure," Davey said.

Taft announced that the board would call the steel executives to another peace conference today.

"We intend to do everything humanly possible to get an adjustment," he said.

May Meet Tomorrow.

The next conference, he said, probably would be held tomorrow. Lewis remained in Cleveland.

Frank Purnell, Youngstown Sheet & Tube president, said that the company was surprised by Davey's action and President Roosevelt's message.

"We don't know what we will do," he said. "Our men have been ordered back to work. It may be too late to stop them."

Late last night hundreds of Akron rubber workers on their way to the Youngstown strike area were turned back by an armed posse of citizens and special policemen. The fire department was deputized to help protect the city pending arrival of the troops.

"Invasion" Barred.

A provision in Gov. Davey's proclamation was that "there shalll be no invasion of these counties by nonresidents, either in small groups or in mass formatoin."

The Mediation Board announced "on the basis of our latest advices" the Republic Corporation and Youngstown Sheet & Tube would not carry through their plans to reopen the Youngstown plants.

It was the only hopeful sign to come out of the peace conference.

The board gave the following account of the day's peace conferences:

We met Monday morning with the union representatives. We discussed with them the question of the terms of the Carnegie-Illinois agreement in an effort to determine just what the issues were, if any, between the union and the companies. They stated positively and unequivocally that all of the companies had agreed that there was no dispute about any term of the Carnegie-Illinois agreement except that one company had a different rate for common labor. The sole question was whether or not a written agreement should be signed.

We then proposed certain possible methods of recording an agreement. The union took these proposals under advisement. The meeting with the union representatives then adjourned to be reconvened on call.

At 12 noon, we met with the employers.

1. We stated at the start that we felt we were beginning under great difficulties because of the orders for opening certain plants at a definite time Tuesday morning in spite of our request expressed Saturday that the status quo be maintained. We asked that this order be withdrawn at least until we could see what progress could be made, since we are advised its execution meant certain bloodshed. The companies involved, Youngstown and Republic, stated they did not feel, in justice to their employes who wished to return to work, that they could delay any longer, in view of the assurances to them of adequate law enforcement.

Assail Carnegie Pact.

2. We then asked the companies whether at this time there was any term of the Carnegie-Illinois agreement which was not agreeable to them. Each of the companies stated that there were terms in the Carnegie-Illinois agreement to which they did not and would not agree under any circumstances, and give us specific examples of such terms.

3. We then proposed various ways by which an understanding reached by collective bargaining could be recorded. The companies questioned all of our proposals as to ways of recording an agreement if reached and all took the position that they would not under present circumstances enter into agreements, written or oral, with the S. W. O. C.

4. We then asked the heads of the companies to meet with the representatives of the union in order to explore the possibility of settling the strike. The heads of the four companies, for different reasons, said that they would not meet with the union representatives now. They said that they would have fully authorized representatives meet each company separately, with the union officials or any of them as the representative of their members and with the board at any convenient time and place, the time and place to be arranged on Tuesday. They said, however, that they would refuse to discuss at such meetings the making or signing of a contract.

Union Men Oppose Meetings.

The board then met with the union representatives and informed them of the situation. They stated that in view of the last reservation they did not believe that such meetings would have any value.

The heads of the companies offered to meet with the board again at any convenient time and place.

We feel on the basis of our latest advices that the plants may not attempt to open Tuesday morning. In view of this fact and the possibility of further conferences on Wednesday looking toward a settlement, we are making no further comment on the situation at this time.

A back-to-work marching order was issued today by the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. and the Republic Steel Corporation—in defiance of Secretary of Labor Perkins' plea for maintenance of the status quo during mediation hearings.

C. I. O. Heads Beg Roosevelt To Halt Steel Mill Openings

Youngstown came from John Mayo, district strike leader.

"There will be so many men (strikers) down there," he declared, "they won't dare to go in."

And he added cryptically:

"We can bring in outside men, you know."

Both sides refused to reveal the numbers at their command, but Frank Purnell, president of Youngstown Sheet & Tube, previously had announced he would not attempt to reopen the mills until he had "adequate assurances of protection" from civil authorities for the men seeking to return to their jobs.

Sheet and Tube Mills to Open.

Republic and Youngstown Sheet & Tube both set the "zero hour" for the attempt to resume operations for 7 a. m.

Sheet & Tube, employing between 15,000 and 18,000 men, called for the reopening of three mills closed since May 26. Two are located about 1 mile east of Youngstown, the third on Brier Hill to the west.

Republic planned to reopen the now historic "Stop 5" plant—which takes its name from its location at the fifth bus stop on the Poland avenue line—where in last Saturday's rioting police hurled tear-gas bombs while unidentified snipers splattered bullets down from the hilltops.

Purnell's order read:

"All employes who want to work should enter the plants at 7 a. m."

He added that time and a half would be paid for overtime above 8 hours on a 12-hour shift.

Purnell declared the mayors of Youngstown, Campbell, Struthers and Hubbard—communities ranged along the embattled 6-mile front—as well as Sheriff Ralph E. Elser "have stated to me they are willing and now able to protect company employes lawfully asserting their right to resume work."

Ray L. Thomas, attorney for the Youngstown back-to-work movement, asserted 280 policemen and 120 special deputies would be on hand.

Sheriff Elser announced:

"I am not going to use my force to break strikes, but I expect to have enough men to maintain law and order. I will deputize whatever men it takes to keep order."

On the Eastern labor front, Lawrence Campbell, secretary of the Johnstown (Pa.) Chamber of Commerce, wired a protest against the closing of Bethlehem's Cambria works to Senator H. Styles Bridges, chairman of the Senate Strike Investigating Committee.

"Johnstown paralyzed by unprecedented and unwarranted State action," Campbell telegraphed. "Bethlehem plant was practically in full operation Saturday, June 19. Strike virtually over. Strikers representing small minority, which included lawless element and known Communists, have convinced Governor to declare marial law and padlock plant, evicting thousands of workers who are desirous as Americans to provide for their families by wages earned.

"Please schedule immediate appearance by citizens of Johnstown before your committee. Wire time for appearance.

Police Guard Cambria Plant.

State police stood guard at the Cambria works again today, permitting only 926 authorized maintenance workers to enter.

Rumors of an impending march on Johnstown by several thousand workers from nearby Harrisburg elicited a statement from Col. Janeway, in charge of martial law in the area, that he found no foundation for the report.

The back-to-work movement in Youngstown was supported by President Purnell with the statement:

"Why let women and children go hungry because of an abstract question that probably can be settled in the court?"

Steel spokesmen have several times suggested the paramount question of signed labor contracts should be placed squarely before the National Labor Relations Board—to determine whether refusal by the steel companies to sign contracts with the C. I. O. constituted a violation of the Wagner labor relations act—and thence for a final decision by the Supreme Court.

Protection Promised.

Republic Steel announced its determination to reopen its Youngstown mill with the following statement:

"According to the direct request of thousands of employes who desire to work, we take this means of notifying them that the Poland avenue gate at Stop 5 will be opened at 7 a. m. Tuesday, June 22, so that employes may return to work.

"All employes should report to their foremen for assignment to their positions.

"City and county authorities have assured us ample protection if needed.

"Operations will be on a 12-hour basis temporarily, with time and a half over 8 hours.

"There will be no discrimination on account of union membership. We cannot, however, rehire anyone who has been guilty of violence or guilty of provoking, condoning or instigating acts of violence against the corporation, its employes, their homes or their families."

To Block Sit-Downs.

C. I. O. leaders have threatened to stage sit-down strikes in the plants if back-to-work movements were carried out, with the announced strategy of sending strikers into the plants along with men genuinely anxious to resume work. Then, once inside, the strikers would sit down in an effort to paralyze operations.

Steel officials, however, seemingly had blocked this scheme by issuing identification "stubs" to men who were still working when the plants closed.

President Purnell, in an "open letter" to employes, explained the company's stand as follows:

"As long ago as April 28, 1937, representatives of the company met with representatives of the C. I. O. for purposes of collective bargaining, and our representatives made an effort to negotiate with the C. I. O. with respect to wages, hours of work, vacations and procedure for adjusting grievances, in behalf of any employes of this company who were members of the C. I. O."

"Small Minority" Cited.

"The C. I. O. representatives adopted the arbitrary position that no agreement could be reached unless the company would sign a contract substantially in the form presented by them.

"At the conclusion of these negotiations, the company representatives informed the C. I. O. that the company was unwilling to sign such an agreement with the C. I. O., and stated its reasons.

"Thereafter, on May 26, 1937, our employes were prevented from going to work by the pickets of the C. I. O., and the plants have been completely closed since that time.

"The company believes that only a small minority of its employes desired a strike to be called and that the great majority of its employes were opposed to any strike and desired to continue their work."

C. I. O. Admits 'Rebel' Lodges In A. F. L. Split

Lewis Union Opens Drive to Organize Other U. S. Workers.

trification Administration Lodge. Their strength was fixed by Lewis at 3,200.

But there was a conflict of estimates of the nucleus number. The representatives of the lodges appeared so jubilant over the assured affiliation with the C. I. O. that details such as first-strength seemed unimportant to them.

Regarding Baker's appointment the official statement said: "Numerous conferences have been held between representatives of the chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization and Federal Employe groups, and it is our judgment that a provisional union should be formed to be known as the United Federal Workers of America.

Chosen for Prominence.

"With this in view, I have selected Mr. Jacob Baker to act, during the organizing campaign among Federal workers, as president of the provisional organization. Mr. Baker, who is well known throughout Government circles, having acted for the past several years as assistant administrator of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration and the Works Progress Administration, is thoroughly familiar with Government procedure and an executive and organizer of national repute."

Heads Organizing Drive.

Baker will be charged with conducting an organizing campaign among Federal workers, and with the approval of the chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, "and as the necessity arises, he will select a board of policy in which geography and concentration of Federal employes will be given consideration."

All Federal employes will be eligible for membership in the U. F. W. of A., except executives with authority to hire or discharge, members of the military and for the time being, postal employes.

The statement said: "The policy of the provisional United Federal Workers of America and all of its affiliated branches will at all times be enunciated by the international executive officers through, and with the consent of, the national policy board of the organization, and in conformity with the ideals of the Committee for Industrial Organization."

Many Branches Affected.

An out-and-out stand against strikes was taken. The C. I. O. assumed the initial financial obligations necessary to the new branch and agreed to lend organizing assistance and personnel along with its facilities throughout the United States. The new union is expecting a charter today.

Meanwhile the committee against false economy—the germ from which the United Federal Workers of America grew—will not disband, as such.

A counting of lodges in the new organization yesterday showed: General Accounting Office, Labor Department, Agriculture, Beltsville, Securities Exchange Commission, Baltimore and Washington Social Security Board Unions, Rural Electrification Commission, Interdepartmental, WPA, ICC, Resettlement, Railroad Retirement Board, Public Assistance Division, FCA, Loans and Currency, and Congressional Secretaries.

The principal factor that brought the move for C. I. O. affiliation ensued from a squabble in the A. F. G. E. over how active the national office should be against pending economy measures in Congress. The national office counseled a quiet course—the seven "liberal" lodges clamored for a mass meeting as expression of indignation. The national office issued a cease and desist order against these lodges and later the lodges were recommended for permanent suspension from the A. F. G. E.

Joined by the five lodges ousted by the convention last September, the seven suspended units undertook the negotiations with the C. I. O. which terminated yesterday.

Farley Is 'Invited to Explain' Mail Deliveries in Strike Area

day will include two Chicago police officials, Thomas J. Courtney, State's attorney for Illinois, Assistant Postmaster General W. W. Howes, Farley, and others.

It is possible the suppressed Paramount newsreel depicting the mass shootings may be shown at this committee session, McKellar indicated. He said, however, any showing will be in executive session, with the press and public excluded.

La Follette protested in a letter to McKellar Saturday that general exhibition of the film might be prejudicial to the doing of justice to the incident of May 30. This is also McKellar's position, but Senators Bridges and Josiah W. Bailey (Democrat), North Carolina, New Deal foe, insist the Chicago police be given an opportunity to answer charges of "mass murder" made by Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, C. I. O. affiliate, last week.

La Follette said yesterday: "The committee will stick to its knitting. We'll get all the facts on all sides of the Chicago situation as fast as we can. Enough evidence has already been secured to justify a thorough investigation. Public hearing will begin as soon as possible."

Bailey said yesterday he was considering seeking an amendment to the postal laws to require delivery of the necessities of life through the mails to "any man anywhere any time who needs them."

Bridges at once pledged support to the proposed amendment.

Bailey added, "My discussion, which I shall make of the matter in the Senate soon, will be with a view to showing, first, that the Government has failed to function by prosecuting those who halted mail trucks, and second, to specific definition of law of the powers under which the Postoffice Department can curtail mail service when conditions are supposedly unsafe."

Bridges, speaking of calling Farley, said: "I want to question Mr. Farley on whether any agreement was made between C. I. O. leaders and postal officials on what mail could pass through picket lines. I also may ask why neither the Postoffice Department nor the Justice Department has moved at once against those who blocked and delayed mail deliveries."

Admitted Tax-Dodger Given Term and Fine

Czech Police Halt Cup Race Balloon

Praha, Czechoslovakia, June 21 (AP).—A Czechoslovakian police airplane today forced down the "Chemnitz," one of the German entries in the twenty-fifth Gordon Bennett balloon race on a charge permission had not been obtained to fly over Czechoslovaia.

Pilots of the balloon, brought down near Jesnitz, were questioned and the balloon searched. Authorities announced a permit for continuance of the flight probably would be granted tomorrow.

The "Chemnitz" was one of 12 bags to take off from Brussels Sunday. One of the Belgian entries, piloted by Marcel Van Scheile, landed at Klokoci near Purnau, in northern Bohemia, at 11:30 a. m., E. S. T. (A Warsaw, Poland, dispatch said the Polish balloon "Lopp" landed about 12 noon E. S. T. at the village of Lawica, near Poznan.) Belgium, Germany and Poland entered three balloons each, France two and Switzerland, one.

Nice Is Conscious During Operation To Remove Eye

Dr. L. J. Goldbach, the operatic surgeon, used a local anesthetic. The executive was conscious throughout the period he was in the operating room. Dr. Goldbach said the Governor's post-operative condition was "perfect."

He will be allowed no visitors for the next few days, however, the surgeon said. It will be necessary to keep a close check on the Governor's condition to prevent unexpected developments.

Gov. Nice entered the hospital a week ago to rest preparatory to undergoing the delicate operation. He said the eye—which he injured in a fall prior to his election—had been bothering him since last fall.

Coast of Peru Shaken By 'Long' Earthquake

Lima, Peru, June 21 (AP).—An earthquake which witnesses said cracked strong walls and turned crosses on church belfries shook the coast of Peru today. Reports from villages 300 miles north of Lima described the quake as "very long."

At Chimbote the population ran panic-stricken to open places.

The Blum Government Resigns.

After a tenure of one year and 17 days, the French Popular Front government has resigned. This development, which embodies a real threat to the political and financial stability of the republic, was not the result of any waning in the popularity of Premier Blum or any marked reduction in the support which he has received from the Chamber of Deputies since he first took the helm in the critical days of June, 1936.

On the contrary, the government's demand for extraordinary powers to deal with the serious financial situation was twice approved by the chamber during the past week. Even the Communists, discontented though they were with certain aspects of the government's program, had fallen into line. This was clear proof that the Popular Front is stronger than any of the individual parties composing it.

The rock on which the Blum cabinet went aground was the Senate. Despite urgent pleas by the premier and by Finance Minister Auriol, this body of elderly gentlemen, less susceptible to public opinion than is the more recently and popularly elected chamber, balked at giving the government extraordinary powers. Yet the French Senate in times past, had approved a grant of extraordinary powers on more than one occasion. It did so at the time of the Poincare government of 1926, of the Doumergue government of 1934, and of the Laval government of 1935.

The Senate's quarrel, therefore, could not have been with the methods to be employed to right the financial situation, but with the government which sought to employ such methods. Indeed, for some time, the upper house of the French Parliament has been sniping away at the Popular Front government. Until now, however, it had hesitated to torpedo that regime.

When the Senate will relent should another than M. Blum now take over the direction of affairs remains to be seen. It is problematical whether, without enjoying a free hand, any government can extricate the nation from the present financial maelstrom. It is even more doubtful whether any government that does not rest, as did the Blum regime, on the Popular Front, can long maintain itself. If, therefore, in overthrowing the erstwhile government the Senate is seeking to force the establishment of a more moderate regime the strategy may prove futile.

In the meantime the action of the Senate has stirred up a wave of resentment among the elements forming the Popular Front. Indeed, M. Blum himself had to intervene and appeal for calm to prevent a threatened general strike in protest against the Senate's action. Yet the very circumstance that such action was even contemplated shows how near to the surface in France volcanic elements are at work.

Business Outlook.

Although the stock market has been adversely affected by the strike epidemic as well as by other factors that create an atmosphere of pessimism, business activity has been maintained at surprisingly high levels.

The Annalist's May index of industrial production, for instance, rose to a figure not far below the peak of 1929. Employment and pay-roll indices for May likewise stood at the highest level since November, 1929, despite the industrial unrest that interrupted production in many factories. Although there has been a rather sharp recession in the steel industry during June, due to current strikes, the operating rate is still higher than at the same time a year ago. Except for these declines and a lessened output of textiles there are few signs of business recession, barring expected seasonal declines.

Of course, the effect of strikes cannot be gauged accurately merely by tracing the variations in current business indices. Some of the damage done is psychological. By destroying confidence in the business outlook, industrial strife indirectly tends to retard the rate of recovery, discouraging new investments, causing hesitancy in placing orders and generally creating a state of mind inimical to enterprise. Col. Leonard P. Ayres, one of the outstanding business analysts of the country, has recently commented upon the fact that business itself is so much better than business sentiment. He describes the second quarter of the year as a period of "pessimistic prosperity."

It is at least encouraging to note the great resistant power of our industrial machinery in face of widespread industrial disturbances and fears engendered by threats of new legislative experiments affecting business. Isolated strikes and lockouts that entail serious losses in profits and wages locally make surprisingly little impression upon the national indices. It is fear that these disturbances may increase and be prolonged rather than current hindrances to production that dim an otherwise most encouraging business prospect.

The Underlying Issue.

As the President's mediation board begins its task of trying to settle the steel strike, the country is faced by questions of the utmost gravity. Because of the arbitrary position taken by the managements of several independent steel companies and the ruthless tactics adopted by the C. I. O., adjustment of their differences will be an extremely difficult and important task. Yet this is only one phase of a still larger problem—the establishment of collective bargaining without coercion and violence.

If the Taft board can work out a formula for restoration of industrial peace to the steel industry, it will render a real service to the Nation. At best, however, it will deal only with the immediate issues in the dispute. It cannot be expected to prescribe a new technique for the conduct of strikes nor a new policy of handling clashes that threaten to get out of hand. But unless thoughtful attention is given to these aspects of the current situation, the outlook for American democracy will be seriously clouded.

The entire country has accepted collective bargaining as a desirable and essential basis for the employment relationship. But this indorsement rests entirely upon the assumption that working men will be allowed to choose representatives of their own, that organizations thus created will accept the responsibility accompanying their power, and that in their struggles with employers they will not challenge public authority. There is no basis whatever for the assumption that the public will support the C. I. O. in any tactics it may choose to adopt to gain its ends.

In recent months the trend has undoubtedly been away from peaceful organization of working men. More and more the C. I. O. has emerged in the role of dictatorship. It has called strikes in numerous plants regardless of whether or not it has a majority of the employes within its ranks. In various cases it has laid siege to those plants to prevent their operation. Indeed, where the local union has been too weak to cripple industrial operations, it has threatened to mobilize men in other industries for an invasion of towns that dare to let the wheels of industry turn without consent of John L. Lewis.

There is nothing resembling industrial democracy in these tactics. Since the C. I. O. has made no move to bring about elections to determine its right to speak for the employes of these plants, moreover, there is at least ground for suspicion that its success in these ventures would represent, in various instances, a dictatorship of the minority. A situation of this kind is certain to arouse profound antagonism, especially when idle workers are losing millions of dollars per week and there is no question of higher wages or shorter hours at stake.

Public authorities thus have a tremendous job of maintaining order. To their credit the great majority of officials have attempted to avoid open conflict in the performance of that duty. But Gov. Earle of Pennsylvania has now gone to the extent of preventing a Johnstown steel plant from operating under threats from the C. I. O. Drastic action can be justified in an emergency. But the threatened C. I. O. invasion had been abandoned and State troopers were fully in control of the situation when the Governor's suspension order was finally carried out. And no steps appear to have been taken to restore to the company the right to use its own property and to thousands of non-striking employes the right to continue working.

If the power of the State is to be used to lock out willing workers from industrial plants every time John L. Lewis threatens to stage a riot, law enforcement will soon be a travesty. Gov. Earle may believe that he is handling a difficult situation in the most expedient manner. But continued surrender to intimidation merely adds fuel to the fires of lawlessness on both sides. If threats of violence are so effective, they may also be used by non-union workers and organized employers, as back-to-work movements in several cities suggest.

It is quite obvious that the strike is leading governmental agencies into untenable positions. Unless we are ready to risk the dangers of mob rule, a stand against lawlessness and coercion on either side will have to be taken. Efforts to mediate specific disputes will mean little if public agencies at the same time are willing to close their eyes to sieges and even to enforce illegal demands of one side to the controversy.

Unfettered.

At least once every silly season somebody inveighs against the ugliness of masculine attire, with an extra kick for the trousers. But in spite of all a man clings to them. He would be lost without them. Soldiers have long realized this. They never have trouble with prisoners after they have relieved them of buttons, belts and suspenders.

Breeches are all right as far as they go; and eked out by leggings and boots they make what is known as a snappy appearance, but they lack the cool comfort of trousers—two long stretches with a sit-upon. And so one may feel sure that the 16,983 enlisted men of the Army Air Corps will give wholehearted approval to the order recently issued which commands them to swap breeches, leggings and boots for shoes and trousers—when trousers are available.

There is what experts call "deep-seated significance" in that last phrase. There is not at the moment trousers enough to go around, not even at so much a leg with seats free; but, happily, a pants shortage does not mean short pants and the tailors in the Philadelphia quartermaster's depot are busy cutting red tape in order to have the garments ready by July 1. There is no lack of material.

And this is quite as it should be. Mr. Ibsen was mistaken when he said one should never put on one's best trousers to go out and fight for freedom. The best is none too good at any time.

Inadequate Lorton.

Washington and Baltimore police can congratulate themselves on the success of their co-operation in running down two members of the erstwhile "Blackface Gang" who escaped from the District reformatory two months ago. One was killed in the maneuver, but since he was shot while drawing a pistol on an officer, there will be few to lament his end. As for the other, present indications are that he will be sent to the Federal penitentiary at Alcatraz, where he will find another escape virtually impossible.

The two men broke out of Lorton by the simple process of driving a guard's car through a flimsy barrier. Lorton is a so-called "minimum security" institution. That is to say, it is not so much a prison as a rehabilitation center. It was never designed to hold desperate criminals. Prisoners of this sort were supposed to be sent to Federal penitentiaries. But those institutions today are so overcrowded that killers of the "Blackface Gang" variety have necessarily been held at Lorton.

More than once during the past few years, these hardened inmates have engineered riots and threats of wholesale outbreaks at the reformatory. The riots did not occur without some provocation, for living conditions at Lorton are deplorable. It is badly overcrowded—today it contains more than 1,500 prisoners, whereas it was originally designed to hold fewer than 1,200. Until recently, moreover, segregation of dangerous criminals from those seeking earnestly to redeem themselves was impossible. Happily, after years of pleading by prison officials, a new unit is expected soon to be completed which will house safely 200 men deserving "close custody."

Even this, however, will fall far short of Lorton's needs. Space for 500 "close custody" inmates is wanted, to say nothing of modernizations throughout the institution. Until Congress and the Budget Bureau agree to supply funds for these improvements, Washington can hope for little more than the successful stifling of riots at Lorton and more efficient work from the police in recapturing those who break through its inadequate bars.

Men And Mountains.

Those who saw the moving picture adaptation of "Lost Horizon" will have some concept of the horrible death that overtook 16 members of a German expedition reported killed in an avalanche on Nanga Parabat. This is the third time that the mountain, one of 50 peaks in the Himalayan range that have never been topped by man, has hurled back a German assault.

In 1932 a climbing party including two Americans, one a woman, was forced to give up when sickness overcame its porters; and three members of a 1934 expedition died when only 600 feet from its summit. Nanga Parabat, rising 26,692 feet into the sky northwest of the Vale of Kashmir, is still 2,500 lower than the famous Everest, but it presents a longer climb from bottom to top.

Sunday's tragedy appears to be the worst in the history of organized mountaineering. In 1924 a British expedition lost 13 men in an unsuccessful attempt to scale Everest. In fact, Jonsong Peak is the only considerable Himalayan to have yielded to climbers without requiring a human sacrifice. By a coincidence, six mountaineers representing four nationalities conquered it on the sixth anniversary of the day when Mallory and Irvine, two Englishmen, vanished above the 27,000-foot camp on Everest, the highest man has ever reached under his own propulsion. When snowslides loosed by monsoons have not sufficed to thwart such puny efforts, thin, snarling blizzards that parch and gag the throat have served to keep all but Jonsong inviolate.

It may be said that man has flown over even the highest of the Himalayas, that he has so closely approximated the achievement of their heights that no worthwhile scientific secrets can be held in their stubborn fastnesses. But the fact remains that man will never rest until he has pushed the topmost rock of Everest under his heel. And even then, it is sure, he will peer out for higher goals, for only when his muscles are hardening against adversity, only when his heart is pounding against frustration, only when his eyes are upward raised does he sense fulfillment of his strange destiny.

Waltman Nominated.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The successful defense of the Supreme Court will no doubt be the biggest news story of 1937.

In my judgment, the best single contribution to that story has been made by your Mr. Franklyn Waltman.

I nominate him for the Pulitzer prize.

Beginning from scratch, Mr. Waltman has maintained a barrage of persistent effectiveness. He dug up the facts and became the commissary of the opposition. His relentless analysis of the sophistries advanced in support of the bill has not been equaled.

He not only merits the Pulitzer prize, but is entitled to the citation given by the Romans: "He deserves well of the Republic."

Boy Scout Leaders.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a mother of sons, I want to pay this simple tribute to Boy Scout leaders everywhere. Such men take up where mothers leave off. By precept and training, they mold the manhood of our little sons. For that which they instill into them, we owe them an everlasting debt. I, for one, am glad to acknowledge mine and to offer a prayer of thanksgiving for all such men whose unselfish service is helping to build America's sanest, most reliable and most inspiring bulwark against the combined menace of communism, greed, mass hysteria and all the forces which threaten the American ideal.

Minimum Wage Legislation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The article of E. O. Jacobson relative to a minimum Federal wage law was quite correct. Having traveled extensively in the United States, our observation as to wages paid would prove that in no way could a minimum wage law be enacted to be effective throughout the States. For instance, in south Missouri a person could work for $1 per eight-hour day and actually make more than one could working at $5 per eight-hour day here in Washington.

There is but one correct way of handling the labor question so far as the Federal Government is concerned, and that is in the shortening and regulating of the hours of the labor day, leaving each locality to regulate its own correct pay per hour. Automatic machinery has greatly shortened the hours of the labor day, and is still shortening the hours, and so long as our legislative bodies continue trying to get things back to where they were in 1932, when the Nation passed from the hand age to the automatic age, just so long will our present unemployment and labor troubles continue and increase.

Replies To Mr. Monroe.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Godfrey Monroe, like his idol, John L. Lewis, of the C. I. O., delights in calling other folks names, but the reading public is not to be fooled by that kind of dog-in-the-manger tactics. This writer is none of the things Mr. Monroe thinks, he is just a New Deal Government employe, fed up on strike news from all over the country.

So the C. I. O. is fighting for "democracy!" Ha, ha, ha! We World War soldiers sure get a laugh out of that! You mean Democracy, spelled with a capital "D," is paying back the $500,000 campaign contribution John Lewis gave to it by sitting tight and letting C. I. O. make a mockery of law and order in the industrial districts.

HARRY W. RANSON.
Washington, June 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Speaking as a strict non-royalist and non-apostle of entrenched greed, I'd say Godfrey Monroe's naivete in his blanket support of the C. I. O. fully matches that he attributes to several critics who take issue with his views. His effort to sprout wings on Lewis' C. I. O. will strike many as comical.

I have slaved in paper and textile mills, and heavy industry plants before and since the war. (No, I don't know it all.) And while in no sense claiming perfection has been attained in capital and labor interrelations, fairness compels the admission vast advances have been made to the benefit of the common man. You'd have to be a chronic malcontent, blind in face of facts, to deny this.

Letters received from at least a score of relatives and old pals in strike-closed plants (I'd call them the thinking type), who should feel ground down, simply ask continuance of work and a chance to add to the liberal stakes accumulated the last year.

G. A. FARSON.

Real Estate Tax.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: By shifting the District of Columbia tax burden from incomes to real estate, Congress has not materially reduced its iniquity. The change seems obviously designed to shield Senators and Representatives from the odium due to your exposure of the original measure. But the real estate tax increase falls on residents of the District of Columbia, while those who legislate such measures go free.

Though spending much of their time in Washington, for which they vote themselves liberal salaries, members of both houses of Congress do not usually acquire homes or realty of any kind here. Their homes and properties are in the States. Increased real estate taxes here do not touch them.

But the home-owners and businessmen, large and small, who live in the District must carry the load. Many Senators and Members of Congress are wealthy. Their homes are palatial. They own properties of great value elsewhere but not in the District of Columbia. The same is true of the President and other high officials of the Administration.

The enlarged real estate tax bill will fall on those who, by years of toil and sacrifice, have acquired homes out of their savings. It is slight evidence of wise statesmanship to spend lavishly and pile huge tax burdens on the multitudes already overloaded.

"Blackmail."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Just what is blackmail if it is not extorting—or attempting to extort—money under threat of exposing some stigma or alleged stigma? If any citizen has illegally, with fraudulent intent, withheld taxes due the Government it is the duty of the Internal Revenue officials to prosecute.

If the citizen is not thus guilty, Uncle Sam looks unpleasantly like a blackmailer swinging a publicity club to extort money which the taxpayer does not legally have to pay. Kidnaping is even more profitable. Why not get into that? We need the money.

An Attack On The Gold Problem

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A real opportunity is presented to the United States, Great Britain and France to not only cure their own ills, but to force peace and prosperity upon the entire world, and to accomplish all this at substantial and immediate concrete profits to themselves.

The immediate barrier to returning prosperity such as we have never known is economic nationalism or tariff walls that effectively dam up world trade; and all other world ills are offshoots. The war of tariffs has been more disastrous to more people and to national finances than the World War of arms. Every home feels its effects, and we are slowly learning that for one nation to prosper, all must prosper.

The offshoots are unemployment in all countries, consequent relief expenditures, in turn causing heavy taxation and unbearable public debt, forming a vicious circle which, feeding on itself, ever widens.

National jealousies and short-sighted juggling for positions of advantage have effectively prevented the nations from getting together to date to uproot the real cause and cure the world. But the above named countries now hold the most powerful known weapon to enforce their will on the world peacefully and to its permanent welfare—the control of the world's gold.

What must be done? 1. Lowering of tariff walls, with every country thinking of the world rather than of itself only. 2. Disarmament, or at least cessation of rearming further. Germany and Italy are to be sympathized with in one regard, namely their unbearable financial position caused by world tariff barriers which in turn has meant their desperate threat to the peace of the world that hems them in. 3. Replace the uncertainty regarding currency values with certainty. To function internationally or domestically, currency values must be fixed and definite, and this means a return by all countries to the gold standard. Managed currencies are but another snare and delusion put forward by glib theorists with no business nor financial experience; all right if the world were inhabited by angels. We have suffered enough from trying out unworkable experiments, and this latest one would ultimately lead to a world war of currencies, and we have had enough wars. No, we must think of money as something of well-defined, permanent value or rather, for the confidence that must precede lasting prosperity, it must be so fixed that we do not think of it at all, but take it for granted.

We all know what should be done; the difficulty is to have the nations agree.

However, the United States, Great Britain and France hold the bulk of the world's gold supply. The necessities of other countries call for redistribution. Let a committee decide the requirements of other nations, particularly the South American countries and Germany and Italy.

Then allow all countries to purchase the quantity of gold decided upon, at $35 an ounce on the understanding that the world price will be increased to $40 an ounce, or $60 for that matter, when redistribution is completed. That would give these countries the profit on the increased price, even if the actual gold were left where it is, and also give the present holders of the world's gold the same percentage of profit on that quantity retained by them.

This would mean reduced Government debts in all countries with consequent reduction of taxes and stimulated business and employment.

The United States, Great Britain and France hold possession of the big stick through present gold control to insist that such action be taken only as part of an agreement to include reductions of tariffs, quotas, armaments, etc., and definite stabilization of currencies on a gold standard based on the higher gold price.

The cry a short time ago was that gold was not a proper base for currencies and credits as there was not nearly enough to take care of the world's increased commerce and financial transactions. The cry is now that there is too much at present values and present rate of production. This is, of course, ridiculous, as the fault is in distribution, and this ill is caused by the man-made errors outlined above, the fruits of which we are now reaping. Creditor nations must be party to lowering of tariffs and accept goods for goods, and the three countries named above must deal fairly with other nations at a conference.

It will be found that all the world's gold, to be increased by production stimulated by higher prices, will be none too much for a booming world commerce.

This action would cause a boom, but this is to be welcomed, not feared, if it is based on a solid foundation through such world agreements. Why starve today for fear that if we are well fed for a while we might starve later?

Catch As Catch Can.

WHEN Eph went fishing for hardheads and trout his gear was good and he had plenty of crabmeat for bait. There wasn't a thing the matter with his skiff or his oars. But his anchor was attached to a poor rope. Because there were ominous signs in the sky and the fish were not biting he edged nearer the shore every time he changed his position; and when at last a squall seemed imminent he was fishing in 12 feet of water which, ordinarily, is just a little shallow for hardheads. He was worried when he found his anchor fouled. He jerked at the rope and broke it. Then he pulled for the shore without taking time to mark the spot with an improvised weight and buoy. "Fisherman's luck!" said Eph.

Smith, Jones, Brown and Robinson (in so naming them I confess ignorance), experienced watermen of Broome's Island, in the late afternoon came down the Patuxent River in their 30-foot motor boat, a coast canoe. In their wake was a "live box," a slatted affair built like a chicken coop, which consequently floated low in the water. It would hold about half a ton of fish, and, with fresh water constantly running through it, would keep them alive till port was reached. Behind the "live box" a skiff was in tow with a hundred foot seine 12 feet in width neatly folded in its stern.

As they neared the mouth of the river the men scanned the water. Rock and blue fish swim near the surface and you can see them leaping. There were apparently no leaping events scheduled; but just off the St. Mary's County shore, opposite Solomon's Island, they saw the water a-sparkle with minnows, a sure sign the little fish were being chased by hardheads.

Jones, Brown and Robinson rowed ashore in the skiff. Jones landed with a rope which was tied to a brail at the end of the seine. The brail was a 13-foot pine pole weighted with lead at the butt end. Brown rowed out several hundred feet and then Robinson began to pay out the seine which was weighted with lead at one end of its width to make it sink; with corks attached to the other end to make it float, thus preserving the perpendicular.

Carefully they cut the fish off from deep water, a hundred feet of vertical net with a brail at each end to keep it stretched. On each brail was a bridle to which a rope was attached at dead center. They then returned to the motorboat, which was anchored clear of the fish, picked up Smith and rowed ashore.

Then it was they began to feel the excitement of the gamble in which they were engaged. The fish were there. Could they get them? What they got in the net might be worth a hundred dollars or it might not be worth more than a thin dime.

Smith and Brown took one end of a rope attached to a brail; Jones and Robinson took the rope attached to the other brail. They marched into the water until they were waist deep. Then they pulled. It was slow and deliberate work.

Presently the corks began to dip. That's when the odds were against them. It meant that the bottom of the net was caught in the grass and was folding instead of moving onward, thus giving the fish a chance to swim over the top. Into the skiff went Smith and made the round of the net, grabbing the corks, pulling them up, giving them a shake. This had to be done with care. Drag it up too far and the fish would swim to safety under the net.

Now the ordinary procedure was for the men to draw together as they backed. The net would then bag in the middle and by the time the four got into a huddle the catch would be secure.

But that is not the way it happened on this occasion. It was soon evident that the net had not only folded but snarled. Moreover the corks were not evenly submerged. What had happened, as soon developed, was that the net had folded on the grass at one end and snagged on Eph's anchor at the other. And the fish that escaped didn't give a hoot whether they escaped over the net in the grass or under the net at the snag. The plain fact is that they got away. When the net was lifted it was wrapped like a rope at one end and couldn't be loosened at the other. At least, not at first. When they got it at last they brought the anchor up with it. It was a right nice little anchor, the kind retailed at Solomon's for $4. And that's all they got for their trip.

That evening the Old Timers went fishing with rod and line and had excellent luck.

"They tell me," said Eph, who was there to attend to the bait, "that the seiners got nuffin' sn' it's a good thing fo' it let' mo' fo' us."

"Probably didn't make any difference, Eph," said Casaul Smith, "one way or the other. And the demands of commerce must be met."

Demosthenes McGinnis grunted. "It may be commerce but it isn't sportsmanship to herd them into a net."

Capt. Ebenezer Longbow grinned. "I'm told," said he, "that good little fish should be seined and not herded.

(For "seened" or "saned" it's all one to the dictionary.)

Fair Enough

Regime Of Bureaucracy.

THE ARROGANCE of the Treasury Department toward the citizens in the application of the income tax has not been challenged for a long time, and the agents nowadays are encouraged to believe that like the cop in a traffic case, they must be feared and placated. Like the cop, also, they have the bulge on the citizen in any controversy over a tax matter, for there is a disposition to accept their word and their judgment as to the right or wrong of any dispute.

Mr. Roosevelt's current campaign against not only fraudulent evaders but taxpayers who are admitted to have complied with the law will tend to make them even more overbearing than they were ten years ago when Senator Schall, of Minnesota, spoke as follows:

"The one glaring governmental agency that constitutes a menace to the citizens is the income tax bureau, which often goes outside the constitutional limitations, and frequently harasses the citizens by unjust exactions, and by the oppressive conduct of its agents. This system has one defect that is fundamental. That is its lack of certainty involving not only the time and manner of payment but the clear, definite and fixed amount. While the bureau is a babel of conflicting regulations and opinions, it believes it is so entrenched by authority granted and assumed, and by its anonymous character that it even dares to attack the citizens by a charge of fraud without substantial pretext or cause."

• • • •

THIS CRITICISM was made in the good old days of prosperity and economic royalty when the bureau was much less bold than it has become under the New Deal. There will be little restraint now that the President has frankly held that an individual who has obeyed the law may be smeared and humiliated merely because the President wants him smeared and humiliated.

Incidentally, Mr. Roosevelt has made no direct mention of, and no apparent reference to, the income tax cases of the Huey Long gang in New Orleans, who were indicted when Huey was fighting the Administration, but exonerated without formal trial after Huey's death and the political reconciliation commonly known as the Second Louisiana Purchase. Jim Farley went fishing last winter with Seymour Weiss, one of the Louisiana defendants who was happily vindicated by the dismissal of the indictments, and Mr. Roosevelt himself found Mr. Weiss socially eligible and agreeable when he stopped in New Orleans on the way to the Gulf to fish.

"Such a regime of bureaucracy is deadly," Senator Schall said ten years ago. "The bureau's increasing arbitrary authority is becoming more sinister and obtrusive, and the system is increasing in complexity and confusion. The procedure of enforcement goes much deeper than that of a tax-collecting system. The bureau is inquisitorial. It is bureaucracy. Washington is cluttered with its offices. Its forces swarm over the country, and the cardinal doctrine under which it operates is to inspire the citizen with fear. Agents, spies and snoopers annoy and plague the citizens. The agents and inspectors, rarely of a high order in point of skill or character, must show some kind of results.

• • • •

"THE BUREAU grades them for promotion of increased salary or still better for the "honor roll," not on what taxes are finally returned to the Government but by the amounts they 'mark up' first or charge against the taxpayer. That practice permits and promotes, if it does not direct, a species of blackmail against the American citizen. It requires no skill or integrity to attack the decent citizen, so the agents can trump up taxes and charges against the perfectly decent taxpayer, and magnify and twist pretexts to do it. Once having started in pursuit, the agent assumes authority to impute fraud to the most innocent transactions, and the perfectly honest taxpayer must admit to indignities, odium, accusations of fraud and criminality, and be put to heavy expenses to prove to his own Government that he is not a criminal. The various departments back up the agents on the principle that any doubt must be resolved against the taxpayers. A citizen is advised not to show his indignation before those whom his hearing is had, as they can make it go hard with him. Advice is unhesitatingly given to crook the knee to those before whom one goes for a hearing, and these hearings are little better than a star-chamber affair where every bias and partiality are against the taxpayer."

But they were comparatively decent then. Nowadays not even Government wire-tapping is considered unethical in the espionage over citizens who may be strictly honest, and as for political blackmail, the Louisiana indictments and their dismissal after the Second Louisiana Purchase will suffice as an example.

The Once Over

Debt Conference.

(All European nations, except Finland, defaulted in their debt payments to the United States when they fell due yesterday."—News item.

Uncle Sam:
A payment is due me today, today—
A payment is due me today;
We'll go through the regular form routine
Of hearing you cry, "No pay!"
All:
Will you have us default, sir, one by one,
Or all in a bunch, which is much more fun?
Uncle Sam:
It doesn't much matter to me at all;
I want to feel, back of the old "eight ball,"
That you, with your records for being fair,
Are as anxious as ever to keep me there.
Belgium:
I'll open the poll alphabetically;
I can't pay a nickle today. Tee! Hee!
Czechoslovakia:
A payment is due on my debt, you say?
Say, lissen kid, how do you get that way?
Estonia:
With pleasure I join in the same routine—
You'll have to keep trying, that's all, old bean.
Uncle Sam:
Ah! Now I must cling to my shirt and pants . . .
The next one in order is La Belle France.
France:
A debt? Would you give me the time and place?
The name is familiar, but not the face.
Uncle Sam:
I'm sorry I brought up the thing, old gal;
We now come to England, my pal, my pal!
England:
My dear Uncle Sammie, of course you know
I never default on a cent I owe;
I'm honest; my character's very strong—
You'll get what I owe . . . if you live that long!

My word is my word and my bond my bond—
(I thought that you knew it across the pond.)
Forget all about it, you dear old dope—
Remember that while there is life there's hope
Italy:
How dare you bring up a thing like money?
If it's done as a joke, well, it isn't funny;
I'm above all reproach, honest, square, and so you
Ought to feel it a pleasure to have me owe you!
Lithuania:
I can't see the need for this money fuss;
Whatever John Bull says is right with us.
Latvia:
The answer of Latvia
Is, "Me no gotvia."
Yugoslavia:
Hoida pokay stravka laba du . . .
Which is Yugoslavish for, "Nuts to you."
Uncle Sam:
That makes it unanimous, high and wide
And once again, thanks for the buggy ride!

The Problem Of Too Much Gold

U. S. Buying Caused Spurt In Mining Activity.

By Herbert M. Bratter.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

THE YEARS since 1929 have witnessed unpredictable changes in the production, distribution and use of gold. Today the United States, Great Britain and some other countries find themselves with actually too much gold. The world's vastly expanded and revalued stock of the metal is more than ample but it is still very unevenly distributed. Some countries still have far too little gold to enable them to link their currencies to the metal. These countries, to be sure, have serious monetary problems; but a surplus of gold is not one of them. Here, however, the surplus is a distinct problem.

The changed position of the "haves" and the "have nots" is illustrated, for example, in the figures representing the gold reserves of the government and central banking system in Germany and the United States. Before the war, in 1913, Germany's centralized gold stock was worth $279,000,000. In 1929 it was worth $544,000,000, and in May, 1937, $23,000,000. In the case of the United States the corresponding figures were $1,290,000,000, $3,900,000,000 and $12,025,000,000. Thus, Germany's holdings today are not even 10 per cent of the prewar figure, and barely 4 per cent of the 1929 total. Our own stock, on the contrary, is almost 10 times as large as it was in 1913 and more than three times the value of our holdings in prosperous 1929.

Taking the world as a whole, in 52 countries the gold reserve increased from $4,071,000,000 in 1913 to $10,166,000,000 in 1929 and $23,496,000,000 last May.

New Value Of Gold Stimulates Production.

WHILE it is true that these figures reflect a tremendous increase in gold production by mines since the advent of the depression, the principal change reflected in them is the revaluation of gold through currency devaluation. A cut of 41 per cent in the content of the gold dollar meant a 69 per cent increase in the value of gold stocks. Secondly, the swollen reserves of the United States and other countries reflect the fact that gold coin has been nationalized and has disappeared from hand-to-hand circulation. Such gold now appears in Treasury stocks. The holdings of Occidental governments, moreover, have been swelled by a large volume of the metal dehoarded in India, as well as by gold jewelry and ornaments which found their way to the melting pot in Europe and America during the depression.

The United States increased the official price of gold by about 69 per cent in 1933-34. Different countries followed different policies in this respect. Taking the countries of the world together, and allowing for differences in population, the average price of gold is now some 85 per cent higher than it was in 1929, according to the Bank for International Settlements.

Under the stimulus it is not surprising that mining, already benefited by depression-reduced costs, was greatly activated. What was previously being thrown aside as waste rock has in many instances become valuable ore, simply because the price of gold has been raised from $20.67 per ounce to $35. In 1936 the world's actual gold production was 80 per cent greater than the average of 1926-29, and 13½ per cent larger than the 1935 output. In a brief time the world's annual gold output will be twice the weight of, and over 3½ times the value of that of 1929.

The United States produces less than one-eighth of the world's total output. If we had only our own output to absorb, the Treasury would have no gold problem. Since 1929 the increase in the value of this country's centralized stock has been 60 per cent greater than all the new gold mined throughout the world. Today the Untied States holds more gold than is held in the treasuries and banks of all other countries of the world combined. Our stock is still increasing at a current rate of nearly $2,000,000,000 per annum.

From January 30, 1934—when the depreciation of the dollar was halted—until now, over $5,333,000,000 of gold have come to the Treasury, or about $49 of new gold for every man, woman and child in the country. As a result of this inflow from abroad, and from domestic mines, melted jewelry, etc., the Treasury today actually holds, almost twice as many dollars in gold as there is currency in the pockets of the people.

Treasury Owns More Than Currency Could Buy.

TO PUT IT in another way, if the Treasury were suddenly to offer its gold for sale, the people of the country—individuals, banks, business houses, etc.—do not have in their pockets and vaults enough currency to buy much more than half the yellow hoard. Behind every cent, every nickel, dime, silver certificate, Federal Reserve note, etc., in circulation, the Treasury holds enough gold to redeem it almost twice over; only, Americans cannot any longer convert their currency into gold. "Ay, there's the rub;" and, since this Nation is on the whole content to use inconvertible currency, what is the need of holding, and particularly of increasing, so large a gold stock at the rate of nearly $2,000,000,000 per annum?

The obvious answer is that there is no need to do so. And because there is no need the world of gold miners and gold holders are afraid we may decide to alter our national policy of paying $35 per ounce for all the gold anyone chooses to send to our shores for sale. It is feared that the Administration may decide to pay something less than $35, or perhaps stop buying imported gold altogether. After all, the 3-year-old policy of paying $35 per ounce has been officially described as "on a 24-hour basis." It is not unchangeable. Therefore gold producers are concerned and gold securities are weak on the stock exchange.

When the United States buys foreign gold, the sellers of the metal receive American funds which, in the last analysis, must be spent or invested here. In other words, we do not get gold for nothing; we give up to foreigners real wealth in exchange for it. We give up the products of our labor and of our soil for a metal whose usefulness to us under existing conditions is only exceeded by that of the completely useless silver for which the Treasury still continues to pay foreigners hundreds of thousands of dollars every week of the year.

Anomaly Of Policy Not Enough For Change.

ON THE FACE of it, the process of offering $35 per ounce for metal newly dug out of the ground in Africa, Canada, Mexico, the U. S. S. R., Australia, etc., only to replace it, "sterilized," in the ground at Fort Knox, Ky., would certainly strike a visitor from Mars as unintelligent. The latter adjective, in fact, would be used by many who hail from less-distant parts than Mars. The mere fact that it is unintelligent for us to keep buying gold is, however, unlikely of itself to lead to a change in policy. More important, perhaps, is the matter of the inconvenience to the Treasury as a result of the gold sterilization policy it voluntarily inaugurated last December.

Under this policy, unlike the previous system, new incoming gold is kept out of the monetary and credit system. Instead of finding its way to the "credit base" and thus increasing the likelihood of inflation, as it did prior to last December, now it is bought up by the Treasury and, as it were, is put in cold storage. The Treasury was, of course, already running a heavy deficit. Having, therefore, no surplus of its own with which to buy the imported gold, and being unwilling to have the latter automatically become new money by issuing gold certificates for the metal, the Government has been forced to borrow the necessary cash from the public.

In other words, since December 21, 1936, gold sterilization has been causing our public debt to grow at the rate of almost $2,000,000,000 per per annum more than would otherwise have been the case. It is one thing for the Government to go into debt in order to give PWA jobs to unemployed Americans. It is quite another thing to do so when the only benefit goes to the workers in foreign mines and steamships.

Any Change Certain To Have Disadvantages.

WHY SHOULD we go on subsidizing gold and silver miners and their governments in South Africa, Mexico, the U. S. S. R., etc.? Should the Treasury abandon the sterilization policy? Should we, moreover, drop the price of gold until foreign bullion ceases to find our market attractive? Or should we stick to our present policy regardless of its obvious disadvantages?

Vault at Fort Knox, Ky.

Economist Predicts No Quick Change In Prices.

These questions cannot be answered categorically. Every change in our current policy since 1932 has had undesirable effects, and any policy now adopted, even one involving no change, would have disadvantages. Opinion is divided as to what our gold policy henceforth should be.

First, as to sterilization of new gold, this Treasury policy is designed to deal only with the gold inflow after it has taken place. It attempts to counteract the effects of a disease without eliminating the germ causing it. If new gold is not to be kept out of the credit base by sterilization, as is now being done, the remaining alternatives are to (a) permit it to enter the base, as it did before last December, and thus increase the pressure toward easier money and price rises; or (b) permit it to enter the credit base, but increase the present legal requirements as to bank reserves. The latter course would have serious disadvantages, particularly since it might drive banks out of the Federal Reserve System. As against "a" or "b," the present policy of sterilization appears to be the lesser evil, as a palliative.

Sentiment Dividend On Wisest Procedure.

SECONDLY, as to the more fundamental policy on the price of gold, opinion is sharply divided, even among those who in 1933 most disagreed with the devaluation propaganda of the Committee for the Nation. Some would lower the price. Others, for different reasons, would refrain from doing so.

Three possible policies suggest themselves—(1) raising, (2) lowering, (3) maintaining the present price of gold. In certain farm and inflation circles there is still a sentiment in favor of a higher price for gold; but this element is not now in the ascendency. There are many, including a large proportion of economists, who recommend lowering the price of gold. These, in other words, favor an increase in the value of the dollar in terms of gold.

This group is divided into subgroups, of which one would have the United States discontinue its present artificial price of gold and permit the dollar automatically to find its true level among the world's currencies before again attempting stabilization. A second sub-group would have the price of gold lowered simultaneously here and abroad by international agreement. Under this plan, stability of international exchange rates need not be disturbed, yet the bonus to gold producers would be eliminated. A third sub-group favoring lowering the price would establish a free gold market and not peg the price of gold at all. In other words, this group would have the United States adopt a system similar to that of Great Britain today.

The opponents of any change in the present $35 price of gold include not only the groups who originally favored abandonment of the old $20.67 price and devaluation, but also not a few anti-inflationists who vigorously opposed abandonment of the gold standard in 1933.

The opinion that a lower gold price would mean lower commodity prices is, in fact, rather generally held in this country. This fact in itself would probably tend to assure the deflationary effects alluded to, should the price of gold be lowered. Under the circumstances, a lower price of gold, whether by international or unilateral action, does not appear likely in the near future. It would require considerable public education.

World Would Resent Limits On Production.

IT WOULD BE only logical to seek a curtailment of mine production, so largely centered in the British Empire. But if the gold producing countries show no willingness to limit or absorb their own output, there is no good reason why we should take it indefinitely. Nor is there any reason why we should give any concession in exchange for a restriction of production by mining countries. It is doubtful, however, whether such countries would voluntarily impose a restriction on mining sufficient to solve America's gold problem. One very great difficulty would be to get the U. S. S. R. —already the world's second largest gold producer—to slow down production.

In view of the fact that this country has more gold than it needs and other countries have too little, it would seem logical for this country to shut its market to foreign gold, temporarily. It would further seem logical for foreign countries poor in gold reserves to arrange to exchange their surplus products for American, South African and Russian gold. If economic forces were permitted free play, the removal of American and British bids from the world market at the prevailing price would result in a rise in the dollar and the pound sterling in terms of gold and other currencies.

In countries holding little monetary gold today—Germany, for example—the dearness of the dollar and the pound would tend to make it more attractive for gold producers in South Africa and the U. S. S. R. to send their product to Germany, etc., for sale, using the proceeds in Germany for needed supplies. In this way gold stocks would gradually tend to be built up outside of the dollar-sterling area. The United States could, while leaving the present selling price for gold unchanged at $35 entirely embargo gold imports until further notice and, as a collateral measure, simultaneously attempt to lessen capital imports by taxation or otherwise. It could, moreover, take other steps at home designed to counteract any tendency of prices to sag as a result of public psychological reaction to the gold policy.

At present no change in the $35 price appears likely. The Administration, Congress and the public are indisposed to experiment with a possibly deflationary measure at this particular time. The problem of the gold surplus and the related problem of "hot money" (the inflow of foreign capital) are serious, but not vital. In most parts of the country these problems, if recognized at all as problems, are not understood. Unless the problem becomes critical, or unless commodity prices give signs of soaring out of control, nothing is likely to be done to alter the present price of gold in the United States.

314 Old Men

By Barnet Nover

The French Senate And M. Blum.

IT IS A relatively rare occurrence for a French cabinet to resign because of an unfavorable vote in the Senate and when it does happen it is usually because the government was on its last legs anyway. For a government in the full tide of its authority and popularity to give up the ghost because the 314 old men of the Palais Bourbon have rejected a cabinet proposal already approved by the Chamber is rare indeed. Yet this is precisely what happened to Leon Blum and his colleagues of the Popular Front regime last Sunday.

Twice in the course of the past week the Chamber had approved by a majority of close to 100 a measure giving the government extraordinary powers to deal with the financial crisis. On each occasion the Popular Front stood solidly behind the regime. Only a handful of Radical Socialists balked at permitting the cabinet to issue financial decrees having the force of law. Even the Communists, who had marched up the hill carrying the banner of revolt against the cabinet, proceeded, after Premier Blum had warned them to change their course, to march down again.

• • • •

IT WAS DIFFERENT in the Senate. That body had for some time looked with unfriendly eyes on the Blum New Deal. At first, under the impulsion of the sweeping Popular Front victory at the polls and the threat of chaos, the senators went along with the radical social reforms put through by the government.

In due course, however, the senators emerged from the storm cellar. More and more governmental measures began to be subjected, in the upper house of the French parliament, to sharp scrutiny. Not a few Popular Front measures were amended. Recently, the request of the regime for plenary powers to raise and lower tariffs was rejected outright. But no real showdown occurred between the government and the Senate until late last week.

It happens that it is not compulsory, according to French practice, for a cabinet to resign following an adverse vote in the Senate., M. Blum therefore ignored the rebuffs he received in that body. But on the question of how to deal with the alarming financial situation there could be no compromise. For, when the bill, twice approved by the Chamber, went through the senatorial mill there was practically nothing left of it but a grinning shadow. Hang your clothes on the hickory limb, said the Senate to Messrs. Blum and Auriol, but don't go near the water. The government refused.

• • • •

THE SENATE'S real quarrel with the Blum regime was not so much over the immediate question at issue as over the larger question of the government's social policy in relation to governmental finance. There is, to Americans, a very familiar ring in the accusations that have been made on the floor of the French Senate against the government's alleged philosophy of spending its way to prosperity.

Thus, in a speech made within the past fortnight, Abel Garday, rapporteur of the Senate's finance committee, complained that Vincent Auriol, the minister of finance, while "theoretically supporting the idea of a balanced budget, was only attaching a relative importance to the deficit and looked to the increase in the purchasing power of the masses and the revival of business to rectify the situation." This M. Garday strongly disapproved as a wholly fallacious theory of how recovery is to be achieved.

And the 74-year-old Joseph Caillaux, chairman of the committee and the real figure behind the present parliamentary crisis, addressing himself recently to M. Auriol, declared:

You came to power with the idea of persuading us that the more one spends, the greater the harvest of revenue there will be. The figures contradict you. You inherited a difficult situation? All the more reason for economizing and with particular urgency in the matter of the public debt. Yet, on the contrary, you have increased expenditures.

I repeat, the situation is dreadful. You are in the grip of an appetite for extravagance that is raging in the land. It is necessary to put an end to it.

When you bring us a plan destined to restore order, government bonds will also pick up and you will regain the confidence which today is distinctly lacking.

• • • •

THE FRENCH SENATE, unlike our own, does not represent the geographic divisions of France except in minor fashion. Nor is it chosen directly by the people, as is the Chamber of Deputies, which corresponds to our own House of Representatives. The members are picked by electoral colleges made up of the national and local officials in the respective departments, and for a period of nine years.

The French Senate, in fact, is a vestigial remnant of the antidemocratic sentiment prevalent among the generation that lived through the Paris Commune and who sought to place a barrier of age, respectability and experience in the way of untrammeled popular rule. It is France's counterpart to the House of Lords, but the House of Lords as of before the Parliament bill of 1912.

In the past the political pendulum in France never swung violently either to the left or the right. Under the circumstance the Senate's role was subsidiary. It functioned as elder brother to the more impetuous Chamber; it rarely sought to lay down the law. But with the coming into power of the Popular Front, a new phenomenon in French politics and the most radical regime holding office since the Third Republic was founded, the Senate has begun to regard itself as the dike keeping out the waters of revolution and chaos. To prevent a dictatorship the Senate has apparently decided to do some dictating itself.

At the age of 74 Joseph Caillaux, the real leader of the Senate's rebellion against the Chamber and the Popular Front, is in his glory. Once the most hated man in France, he nows bids fair to be the darling of the reactionaries who not so many years ago were demanding his head.

It was Caillaux who mobilized his not unreluctant fellow graybeards in opposition to the Blum regime's financial program. It happens he is playing with dynamite. "If the government is thrown down," said M. Jouhaux, chief of the General Confederation of Labor, some time ago, "the trade unions will not accept the verdict . . ." But playing with dynamite is also in keeping with M. Caillaux's temperament and career.

Franklin A. Gaylord

By William Lyon Phelps

I salute Franklin A. Gaylord, of Englewood, N. J., who at the age of 81 is the author of a volume of original poems called The Builders of the Atoll (and other poems), published by the Tuttle Morehouse Taylor Co., New Haven, Conn. This little book appeared in 1934, but is, I am glad to say, now ready for fresh distribution.

Dr. Gaylord resided for 18 years in Russia, and this book includes some of his translations from Russian literature. When I was in Russia in 1911, I had the pleasure of meeting him and Mrs. Gaylord in St. Petersburg; we had much good talk together, and we attended a mass said for the repose of the soul of Stolypin.

• • • •

Besides translations from the Russian, there are also some poems translated from German and from the French of Victor Hugo, La Fontaine, and others, but the original verses I particularly admire, for the beauty of their thought and their economy of language, where every word pulls its weight. For example:

Mount Everest.

Upon they sun-illumined peak
No foot of man hath ever trod;
No human voice hast thou heard speak;
Thou talkest there alone with God.

A Prophecy.

Out of the smoke and grime,
Forth from the mist and the slime,
Clock of God striking the time,
Cometh a Man.

The poem that gives its name to the volume, "The Builders of the Atoll," is a poetic conception of submarine co-operation; a good example of transfiguration.

'Fair Practices' Code for Coal Goes In Effect

Meetings of Commission to Fix Prices, Enforce Act to Begin Today.

By the Associated Press.

A code of "fair practices" for the Nation's 3,500 soft coal producers went into effect yesterday by order of President Roosevelt.

The code, approved by Congress in the Guffey-Vinson coal act, provides a 19½ per cent tax on coal of producers who have not signed it and guarantees workers the right to bargain collectively.

The act itself authorizes the National Bituminous Coal Commission to set minimum prices and to enforce the trade practices. Details of the commission's orders are scheduled to be determined at meetings of its boards in 23 districts, covering 32 States. These meetings start today.

The commission's first act after receiving President Roosevelt's order making the code effective was to call a hearing here July 12 to determine what producers could claim exemption because their coal affects only intrastate commerce.

The commission also decided to give Alaskan producers until August 1 to accept the code. It was announced they had not had time to reply to the board's notices.

C. F. Hosford, commission chairman, said in a formal statement the Guffey-Vinson act and code "mark a new approach by the Government to the problem of helping industry to put its house in order."

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

After Three Years' Devotion, Her Husband Is Bluntly Indifferent Now; Wife Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married for three years to a man nearly twice my age (he is in his forties) whom I love more than anything on this earth. At one time, he loved me as much but now I'm not so sure he cares. During our courtship and up until a few months ago he was wonderfully devoted and attentive, thinking only of me and doing everything for me. Suddenly he changed. He doesn't seem to give me a thought any more. . . .

• • • •

I have several reasons for thinking there is another woman, though I can't be positive. But there must be. Always before, he was constantly making love to me. This stopped suddenly. I am sure it is nothing I have done. I always try to look my best, although last year, when we could afford it, I bought a good many clothes, and this year, when I am told we can't afford it, I am wearing the old ones. I don't know where the money goes. I never see it.

• • • •

My husband complains of always being tired now, although as a salesman his work isn't one-third as tiring as mine, which is housework. Yet when friends drop in, he can always laugh and talk with them, though not with me. His work keeps him out almost every night, yet if I decide to go along he usually decides he doesn't "have to see so-and-so tonight" and we come in early. Otherwise, he is out until 11 or 12 o'clock.

• • • •

I have worried so much during the past two months that I am under a doctor's care and on the verge of a collapse. I am just about to give up, as he means everything to me. Please tell me what to do.

DESPONDENT.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR DESPONDENT: While circumstantial evidence suggests that your husband has become enmeshed in an extra-marital affair of the heart, this may not be the case. There may just possibly be some underlying physical, nervous or psychic disturbance to account for his blunt indifference. This, I am convinced, is a problem for the Washington Life Adjustment Center, 1464 Columbia road northwest, telephone Adams 1033. A detailed survey and analysis of your marital history leading up to the estrangement of the past two months is needed for arriving at a helpful understanding of the situation.

Since you love your husband so dearly, you must walk softly here in order to avert a complete break. I advise you to remain quietly (though not cloyingly) affectionate, agreeable, tolerant and attractive in appearance. Hard though it will be to do so, let him come and go unchallenged and unquestioned. Don't make it necessary for him to frame excuses for going out of evenings; and, don't ask for, nor indicate that you expect, explanation when he returns. After going into the case in detail, I am sure Dr. Elmer Klein, psychiatrist at the Life Adjustment Center, can tell you exactly how to deal with this situation most advantageously.

We are called upon to deal with the "hard to please," "can't find what I want," "of course you wouldn't have this in my size" customers every day. The fact that "Peter Pan" admits visiting nine hat shops before she found a hat that held "more than a cupful" (I'm sure it was too large) proves she's just another pill.

In Defense of Shoppers.

DEAR SHOPKEEPER: If this is a sample of your chronic attitude of mind toward customers who know what they want and insist on getting it (which is certainly their prerogative and privilege so long as they are willing to pay for it) you need either to take a vacation or to read Dale Carnegie's "How to Win Friends and Influence People." I don't agree with you at all that a woman is necessarily a "pill" because she has the imagination and stamina to visit nine hat shops in search of a hat that will do. After all, you know, most of these fashions which seasonally inundate the country in countless duplicate were originally designed for some woman who had the rugged individuality to demand something distinctively suitable and flattering to her own sweet (or possibly not so sweet) self.

• • • •

The woman shopper of discriminating taste, real intelligence and moral courage would sooner be called "a pill" by a salesperson than "a freak" by her acquaintances; though a shopkeeper or salesperson with a creative enthusiasm for his profession will accept the special-case customer as a challenge to his resourcefulness rather than as an affront to his senses.

• • • •

It has been my observation that the salesperson who is readiest to classify certain customers as "pills" is the one whose stock sales argument is: "But this is what they are wearing," and "This is what they are showing." Your intelligent customer, as a rule, is more interested in what she proposes to wear than in what the suggestible-minded have been induced to adopt. But it's amazing how often she will buy something she doesn't really want, out of sheer gratitude to the salesperson or shopkeeper who has the intelligence to show a courteous sympathy with her difficult quest. And she'll cling for life to the mercantile establishment which makes a real effort to find her what she wants.

Youthful Effect Stressed In New Wedding Gowns

Paris (U.P.).—The extremely youthful trend of this season's clothes has had its effect on wedding gowns. The most recent Paris brides have been dressed in demure creations of white mousseline or organdy which greatly resemble the frocks worn by French children for their first communion.

Instead of the halo head veils or the conventional wreaths of orange blossoms, lilies of the valley or camelias, the dressmakers are using little round caps of tulle with a long floating veil attached just in back.

Velvet Goes Sturdy.

New York (AP).—Transparent velvet is fast becoming a sturdy fabric. Manufacturers are perfecting a kind for fall which not only is crush-resistant, but also water-resistant. The new velvet does not attract dust and lint.

Gingham and Linen for Summer Dancing

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

THE GINGHAM gown is now traveling with the best people and going to the most pretentious places. It all started with the unprecedented vogue for cotton this summer. Evening gowns of cotton and linen, designed originally for resort wear and informal dining and dancing, have developed in styling and smartness, until they have been accepted as an appropriate medium for any important summer evening affair. The merging of varied cotton materials and unusual colors together with dramatic designing have helped bring cotton to the fore as a leader for midsummer dancing. The lovely gown above is of white nubby linen, dramatized by a halter top and wide hemline of red and white checked gingham. A concealed talon fastener in the placket enhances the slim princess lines of the ultra-smart styling, and promotes a smooth, unbroken hipline.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By
Dr. Logan Clendening.

Strained Vegetables.

Quite a change has come over the practice of infant feeding in the last few years, especially in respect to an exclusively milk diet.

Milk is the perfect food. Certainly as nature intended, it is the perfect infant food, but as nothing in this world is completely perfect, it has one or two defects. One is that it contains too little iron, and the other is that it may contain no Vitamins C and D. For many years children's specialists have been adding Vitamins C and D to the infant's diet, usually using orange juice for Vitamin C and cod liver oil for Vitamin D. In late years, they have been advocating the addition of some substance which will furnish iron at a very early age.

Nature provides for the deficiency of iron in milk by supplying a reserve of iron in the liver and in the blood itself of the child before birth. This reserve might theoretically be expected to last until the child is about six months old, but it is usually exhausted before that, so that it is recommended that the iron-containing foods should be added to the infant's diet by at least the third or fourth month.

The best foods to supply iron are egg yolk and pigmented vegetables, such as spinach, carrots, etc. Cereals alson contain a considerable amount of iron. It is here that the usefulness of the strained fruits and vegetables in infant feeding come in. These are now supplied by many manufacturing firms in canned form. Packed singly, they include asparagus, beets, carrots, celery, beans, peas, spinnach and tomatoes. Strained fruits are also packed singly. Vegetable soups form a combination of strained vegetables, sometimes with cereal or beef broth.

These foods are well tolerated by nearly all babies, and digestive upsets from the use are rare. The digestive tract of the infant has to become used to these foods somewhat gradually and, therefore, large amounts cannot be fed at first. They soon get used to them, however, and thrive on them.

The manufactured articles make the vegetables into a finer state of division than can be obtained by ordinary household means.

The council on foods of the American Medical Association is of the opinion that strained fruits and vegetables, because of their physical structure, are useful foods for infant feeding and for certain types of diet. They are good sources of Vitamin B, iron, and probably other necessary nutritional factors. There is also a psychological aspect in their use, which is that the baby at an early stage should be taught to receive food from the spoon and to accept a variety of flavors and textures.

Editor's note—Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending ten cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of The Washington Post. The pamphlets are "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "Care of the Hair and Skin."

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

WE HAVE some petticoat popping to do today. First, we think it's time for a protest against this vogue for elegance that the decorators have decreed. It's all very pretty, of course, and we're a great believer in having a home as beautiful as means will permit. And we don't hold for taupe mohair just because it wears like iron either. But we've seen just one white linoleum floor too many . . . just one more pale satin chair than we can approve. After all, a lot of American women do their own work.

White linoleum and white broadloom show every foot mark and that's too much cleaning for the lady who has to get rid of footmarks. Satin upholstery lasts just exactly three years under reasonable use, and that's not long enough for its cost in the average home.

You see, we've just been on a round of the most distinguished of New York decorators' exhibits of new rooms—the rooms that set styles as the Paris fashion openings do. And we just can't see families growing up in those too, too beautiful visions of blonde floors and pastel upholsteries. 'Twould be well and good if we all had a retinue of ancestral retainers in our marble halls and all the money we need for replacements.

What we ask in the exhibits are rooms that interpret gracious backgrounds in terms of every-day life. The distinguished decorators do beautiful things with rooms in the royal manner, but they fail conspicuously in the execution of rooms that people—just people—are going to live in.

And yet it requires more ability to do rooms of charm on a small sum than on an unlimited amount. A room costing a young fortune ought to be beautiful. A room built on imagination and ingenuity is a lot more of a triumph for the interior decorator with real talent.

Do you know where we've found more ideas of originality coupled with livable charm? Right in the big department stores, for their decorators are in touch with the actual needs of actual people. So we doff our Breton sailor to the anonymous decorators in the stores who plan pleasant possible ways for us to make our homes more amiable while the thinkers-up of mirrored dining tables and velvet lined bathrooms grab off all the glory.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, June 21.

LAST NIGHT I attended the biggest dance in the world, and my middle-aged heart is still a-tingle from the kick of it. When you are confronted with 3,000 young couples pointing a shoe under the stars, with a crowd of 7,000 eyeing their antics, you are up against something several shades off the usual, and it is bound to leave its mark!

ALICE HUGHES.

That's what goes on at our great free public dances on the mall in Central Park. A 21-piece dance band plays the tunes, gents must wear coats, astounding types of stepping are not only countenanced, but welcomed, and joy is unconfined. There's no more thrilling sight in all summer in New York than these evening shindigs in the park.

Miss Mary McKenna, whose title is Supervisor of Recreation, takes personal charge of the park hoofings, and 25 of our handsomer cops, beautiful in neat uniforms and white gloves, are on hand to preserve the amenities, but they are entirely ornamental, for the youths and maidens behave with their best party manners. True, all sorts of dancing goes. A helpful bystander pointed out to me such droll fancies as The Conversation Walk, The Shag, The Lindy and Flea Hops and the Peabody—all of which were hardly hearsay to poor old Hughes.

But the kids did have a good time, heart-warming to the innocent bystitter. These things go on twice a week all summer, and they're grand! And I noticed, as I hobbled from the scene, that the statue of Ludwig von Beethoven, there on the edge of the Mall, seemed to be smiling on the scene!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The other day I inched my way into the fancy luncheon club which meets daily at the Rainbow Room, high over Fifth avenue, and who should be tossing a party but the venerable Sir Harry Lauder—and paying the check, too. It was mostly male, but among the few ladies I noted "Mother" Morris, widow of the late great theatrical agent; her pretty daughter, Ruth, and Greta Lauder, niece of Sir 'Arry.

• • • •

So Frank Morgan's pretty and talented daughter Claudia has gone and done it again—married a local advertising man named Charles Hornburg, jr.! She's a kid in her 20's, yet she's now taken Spouse Three. An old-fashioned girl, I just can't see how the girls run through the young men so rapidly! But I suppose if I could I wouldn't be old-fashioned—so there it is . . .

• • • •

Had a look at a new first novelist the other day—Helen Anderson, whose book, "Pity for Women," has just struck the counters. She's a San Francisco girl, vintage of '11, and turned to writing (says she) because nobody would give her a job on the stage. Which is certainly an original reason for taking up the literary life . . .

Trotting around the Normandie the other day just before she pushed her sharp snout downstream, I ran head on into little Simone Simon (pronounced Smong-Smong), the small French kid they have tried so hard to turn into a movie dream girl in Hollywood. She's a cute tike, and it's too darned bad that her ineradicable French accent limits her so. After her first hit in "Girls' Dormitory" she hasn't clicked a lick. But she was happy to be going home, and smiled prettily for the camera boys.

One of the best of our specialists in this line is Margaret Frank, who specializes in what she calls the "spot massage"—which means attacking the overweight area with fang and claw. She'll reduce a hefty thigh before you can say "ouch." Among Margaret's clients are Betty Compton Walker, Fanny Brice, Dorothy Poynton Hill and Gertrude Lawrence. Boettigers Have Reserved Rooms at Wilmington Hotel for Affair.

Miss duPont and Fiance Spend Quiet Week-End; Gifts Pouring In.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

From Wilmington comes word that "Sistie" and "Buzzie" Dall, grandchildren of President and Mrs. Roosevelt, will be among the 300 guests who will witness the ceremony that unites Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., and Miss Ethel duPont Wednesday, June 30.

Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger, brother-in-law and sister of the bridegroom-to-be, already have made reservations at the Hotel duPont in Wilmington for the night before the wedding and for Mrs. Boettiger's children and their nursemaid. Both Mr. and Mrs. Boettiger are to be members of the wedding party.

Following the wedding reception for 1,000 guests at Owls Nest, the Boettigers and the Dall children will accompany the President and Mrs. Roosevelt to Hyde Park, where they will be guests over next week-end.

duPonts Have Reserved Ten Rooms at Hotel

Ten other rooms in the Hotel duPont have been tentatively reserved by Mr. and Mrs. Eugene duPont, father and mother of the bride-to-be. These will be held pending the arrival of out-of-town guests for the wedding and reception. Among others who already have made reservations at the hotel are Postmaster General and Mrs. Farley.

Miss duPont and her fiance spent a quiet week-end at the duPont estate, going into the city several times for last-minute trips to the postoffice as they mailed their "thank you" notes for wedding gifts.

Twice a day a town car, loaded to the top with gifts, rolls away from the tiny postoffice at Greenville, Del., and on down Owls Nest road toward the du Pont estate. The postoffice, incidentally, was recently repainted in honor of the approaching wedding, and has been the center of much attention ever since presents began arriving soon after the invitations went out.

Yesterday afternoon Mr. Roosevelt and Miss duPont attended the funeral of Miss Alyse Matthews Hunneman, 20-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Hunneman, of Happy Hollow Farms, Malvern, at the Bryn Mawr Presbyterian Church, Bryn Mawr, Pa. Miss Hunneman, who died in a Baltimore hospital Thursday from toxemia following an operation, was to have been a bridesmaid.

Because of the death both Miss duPont and Mr. Roosevelt sent regrets to a number of gay affairs in and around Wilmington that had been scheduled for the week-end. Miss duPont wore to the funeral a dark sheer ensemble and a small dark hat.

Franklin, Jr., Returns To Finish College Course

Last night Mr. Roosevelt left the duPont estate to return to Harvard to finish his year's work. According to plans, he will not be back in Greenville until Monday, June 28.

Meanwhile, final plans for the wedding seem to be shaping up nicely. The 78-year-old Christ Church in Christiana Hundred, which will be the scene of the ceremony, has been redecorated inside and out. Its lawn has been mowed and roads have been built to it, in keeping with what would be expected of a "simple" wedding in which the daughter of an economic royalist" and the son of a Democratic President will be the principals.

While information on the wedding gown, the attire of the bridal party and reception details are not supposed to be released through the publicity man's department until June 30, the rumor is going around that it's to be an "all-white" wedding and that Miss duPont already has posed for photographs which are to be held—even from society editors—until the wedding day.

One person, however, who is to be closely connected with the ceremony is not being secretive about his part on the program. He is Dr. Charles M. Courboin, Belgian-born American artist, who will give a concert for an hour before the wedding and will play the traditional processional music from "Lohengrin" as Miss duPont walks down the aisle, escorted by her father.

The event probably will be just another day's work in the life of Dr. Courboin, who was private organist to the late Rodman Wanamaker and once played for former President Coolidge, and who was made Knight of the Order of the Crown of Belgium by the late King Albert.

Alethea Bryan Burkin Wed to Charles West

Mrs. Alethea Bryan Burkin became the bride of Mr. Charles K. West at 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Bryan of 2812 Chesterfield place, with Dr. Gove G. Johnson officiating. Only relatives were present.

Immediately after the ceremony the couple left on a wedding trip. They will return in two weeks to make their home in Washington.

Gold Cup Cruise to Feature Country Fair

Miss Ann Thompson, left, and Miss Fennela Castenado try out the whistle of the S. S. Potomac, the craft to be used for the Gold Cup Country Fair Cruise, to be held this evening. Its purpose is to raise funds for the President's Cup Regatta, scheduled for September.

Regatta Cruise To Be Tonight

S. S. Potomac Will Take Guests on 'Country Fair' Trip.

REGATTA PARTIES will be in order this evening when the steamer Potomac carries a crowd of friends of the President's Cup Regatta Association down the river, starting at 8:30. The event on schedule is the Gold Cup Country Fair Cruise—the first of its kind ever held in this city.

Among those who will entertain guests will be Mr. and Mrs. James A Councilor, who will have with them Admiral and Mrs. R. R. Waesche, Commodore and Mrs. Leo Colbert and Miss Gladys Fielding, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. McCormick will be with Mr. and Mrs. James Burch, and with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Smith will be Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Claxton Baur and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Fullerman. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Schaeffer will accompany Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Wilhelm.

"Regatta girls" attending the function will be Miss Ann Carmack, Miss Fenella Castenado, Miss Alice Clark, Miss Patricia Evans, Miss Margaret Lee Ferguson, Miss Dorothy Gould Fowler, Miss Ellen Knipe, Miss Betty Mattingly, Miss Eleanor Mattingly, Miss Hebe Reynolds, Miss Ann Thompson, Miss Lillian Willett, Miss Polly Wirgman. They will be garbed "country fair" style, wearing sun bonnets and carrying baskets a la "Little Buttercup" in "Pinafore," with candies and peanuts for sale.

Everett O. Johnson Weds Mary Finch

The marriage of Miss Mary Roberta Finch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Augustus Finch, and Mr. Everett Orville Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Myrton L. Johnson, of Straughn, Ind., took place yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents in Virgilia street, Chevy Chase. The Rev. Thomas G. Smyth, of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, officiated.

The ceremony was performed in the drawing room, which was decorated with pink roses and delphinium, and the bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of white silk net over white satin, fashioned with a high neck and long, tight sleeves, puffed at the shoulders. Her fingertip veil of tulle was draped from a coronet of satin and tulle and her bouquet was of bride roses and lilies of the valley, with a white orchid in the center.

Mrs. Gerald J. Davis, sister of the bride, was the only attendant. Her frock was shell pink net over satin, and she carried an arm bouquet of briar cliff roses and delphinium.

Mr. David Worth Dennis, of Richmond, Ind., was Mr. Johnson's best man.

A reception was held immediately following the ceremony and the dining room was beautifully decorated with bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson left later for a wedding trip. They will be at home after July 1 at Richmond, Ind.

Miss Alice Frink Is Bride Of Lieut. C. B. Westover

Four Sisters Figure in Cathedral Ceremony, One of Prettiest Military Weddings of the Season in Washington.

Four sisters figured in the wedding here yesterday afternoon at which Miss Alice Frink, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. James Luke Frink, became the bride of Lieut. Charles Bainbridge Westover, son of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Oscar Westover, at the Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul.

Mrs. James Darrach, of Fort Monroe, Va., sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Two other sisters, Miss Polly Frink and Miss Barbara Frink, were also among the attendants who participated in one of the prettiest military weddings of the season.

With the Rev. Henry Justice Miller standing at the flower-banked altar ready to perform the ceremony, the bride walked down the aisle with her father, who gave her in marriage. Her ivory satin wedding gown was cut on simple lines, with a sweeping train, a lace yoke and long, tight sleeves. Her veil fell from a small lace cap that had been worn by her mother and sister, and she carried a shower bouquet of gardenias.

Attendants Attired In Pink Marquisette

All of the bride's attendants wore frocks of fluffy pink marquisette, with bouffant skirts sweeping into slight trains. There was a suggestion of sleeves in the tiny puffs extending across their arms and held in place by three small shoulder straps. Pink net veils over their faces and down to their shoulders and bouquets of pink African daisies completed their ensembles.

Among those who served as attendants in addition to the bride's sisters were Mrs. W. P. Freudenthal, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Elizabeth Jones, of Erie, Pa.; Miss Anne Claude and Miss Lou Menefee, of Washington, and Miss Mellie Hatch, of Fort Sill, Okla.

The two flower girls were Alice Torrey Griffith, daughter of Mrs. Alice Torrey Griffith, of Washington, and Alice McNeil, daughter of Commander and Mrs. Donald C. McNeil, of Norfolk, Va. Their frocks were also of pink marquisette, set off with wreathes of flowers in their hair, and quaint bouquets.

Ensign Woodhull Serves as Best Man

Ensign Roger Woodhull was best man. Ushers were Lieut. LeRoy Lutes, Lieut. Albert Rutherford, Lieut. David Nye, Lieut. Randy Hines, Lieut. Robert Gilbert, Lieut. A. D. Searles, Lieut. Allen Clark and Lieut. William Stratton.

A reception at the home of the bride's parents followed the ceremony. Mrs. Frink, the bride's mother, received the guests. She wore a gown of hyacinth blue chiffon, a leghorn hat and pink gloves.

When the young couple left on their wedding trip, the bride was attired in an ensemble of beige crepe with red accessories. Her bouquet was a cluster of gardenias.

After two weeks, Lieut. and Mrs. Westover will return to Washington to spend the remainder of the summer. In the fall they will be stationed at Randolph Field in San Antonio, Tex.

COLORFUL NATIONAL PARKS

Each of these three neighboring National Parks is an outstanding scenic wonderland . . . yet each is distinctly, memorably different from the others.
Zion with its massive rock temples and monoliths, has color and inspiring grandeur. Bryce is a labyrinth of fantastic carvings, a "dream city" of another age, haunting in its loveliness. And Grand Canyon, 13 miles wide and a mile deep, with its mystic colors, its shifting lights and shadows, is something entirely beyond words.
And so easy to see—for they're all in a group, connected by splendid highways, and can be visited on a low-cost, 6-day motor coach tour.

Sec. Wallace Issues Plea To Democratic Women

Tremendous Patriotic Responsibility Rests on Party to Safeguard Institutions, Secretary Tells National Council at Season's Final Meeting.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

"A tremendous patriotic responsibility rests on the Democratic Party, to safeguard democratic institutions for the future," the Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace last night told the Democratic Women's National Council. He addressed its final meeting of the season, in the Washington Hotel, and was introduced by Mrs. Henry A. Dodderidge, the council's new president, who described him as a progressive, far-seeing and valuable statesman.

"The Republican Party, with no effective philosophy, no effective leadership and no prospects of getting either," is in no position to meet the situation, Wallace said, adding: "It is unthinkable that the Republican Party should be allowed to come into power—it is an unpatriotic thought."

Secretary Wallace warned against divisions in the Democratic ranks and pointed out the party's obligation to work through the Government to serve the public welfare. He stressed the need for "a sufficiency of adjustment in the balance of income." This should be done, he said, by bringing eventual stability and "never having less stuff to divide."

He advocated a taxation policy that would make taxes "no end higher than big businessmen want them—they are just plain dumb on the subject of taxation." A plan which would include soil conservation and expenditure of Government moneys on agriculture to bring the farmer's average income per capita up to 60 per cent of that of the city dweller, would be reflected in better balance throughout the country and sounder, more prosperous conditions, he asserted.

"It is proper to take part of the national savings to conserve national resources," the Secretary declared. "The farms can't indefinitely send their fertility and life blood into the cities without being replenished."

The tenancy problem was another he discussed briefly and declared it would be an achievement if the Roosevelt Administration if a start is made in meeting it.

Technology, organized agriculture and organized labor are all beneficent forces for public welfare, he said, but need balance. This, he indicated, must come from the power of government, used to bring about the adjustment. He concluded with a definition of democracy in its larger sense as "educated understanding and action based on the will of the majority."

Mrs. Wallace, who accompanied the Secretary and sat toward the back of the room during the meeting, was introduced following his address.

Other distinguished guests were presented and some talked briefly before the speaker of the evening arrived. They included Mrs. Pat McCarran, wife of Senator McCarran; Senator Clyde L. Herring, of Iowa; Representative Virginia Jenckes, the Special Assistant to the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Julien Friant, Col. John Laird, Judge and Mrs. Arthur J. Mellott, and Mrs. Thomas McAllister. Mrs. R. Kirkpatrick Noble greeted the guests as they arrived.

Washburns Leave For Virginia Beach

Married at Christ Church Here on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. James Victor Washburn, whose marriage took place Saturday afternoon at Christ Episcopal Church, will spend the next two weeks at Virginia Beach.

Mrs. Washburn is the former Miss Nancy Jane Percival, daughter of Mrs. Justin F. Percival and the late Mr. Percival, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Washburn. The Rev. Edward Gabler officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. J. Elmer Oliver, wore a gown of white mousseline de soie made on princess lines, and carried a bouquet of bride's roses, lilies of the valley and blue delphinium. Her brief veil fell from a pleated halo headdress. The matron of honor was Mrs. Joseph J. Howard, jr., who wore a frock of yellow net over taffeta, with a headdress of yellow flowers, and carried a bouquet of talisman roses. Mary Sue Oliver, niece of the bride, was flower girl, wearing a long dress of blue organdy and carrying a nosegay of old-fashioned flowers. The best man was Mr. Joseph J. Howard, jr.

Plan Patriotic Exercises.

Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic, Department of the Potomac, will conduct patriotic exercises at Fort Stephens, Thirteenth and Rittenhouse streets, July 12, at 6:30, commemorating the battle of Fort Stephens. Other patriotic organizations will participate in the ceremonies. A meeting of the department council was held last week at the home of Mrs. Covert, department secretary.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

CLUBS in the Capital will find themselves obliged to operate without some of their officers, directors and active members this summer as camps, Europe and other vacation spots lure them away. Many of the organizations have suspended all programs for the season, but there are still those which keep a few interesting things going on for those who must remain to face the heat.

Among those who will be off soon are Dr. and Mrs. Lee Corbin, who leave this week for the American Library Conference in New York City. (Dr. Corbin is head librarian at the Smithsonian Institution and Mrs. Corbin is president of the board of directors of the Y. W. C. A. and a former president of the Women's City Club and the Smith College Club.) After the conference they will go to their camp, Russet Lodge, at Dorset, Vt.

MRS. ROBERT E. SNODGRASS, better known in musical circles as Ruth N. Snodgrass, with her two young daughters, Ruth Maye and Eleanor, will go to New York and from there to Canada, where the girls hope to see the "Quints." Ruth Maye, 11, and Eleanor, 9, keep well posted—literally—on all the movie stars. The walls of their playroom are practically papered with pictures of them. Their favorite sport is riding up and down on escalators whenever they have opportunity, to the discomfort of their mother, who much prefers elevators.

THE FRED E. WRIGHT family (Mrs. Wright is first vice president of the local Y. W. C. A. and chairman of the nominating committee of the national board) will spend most of the summer at the Thousand Islands, two of which they own. Helen, however, a graduate of Vassar this year, will spend a month at Mount Wilson Observatory in California with her father and her brother, Hamilton Wright, and will return to Vassar in the fall as part-time instructor in astronomy and to work for her master's degree. Finley and Kenneth complete the family group.

BOTH CUPID AND VACATIONS are making inroads in the ranks of the junior section of the Women's Bar Association. Patrice Rice, chairman of the section, was elected delegate to the American Bar Association meeting in Kansas City in September, but she has chosen a wedding trip instead of one to the convention. She will be married to William Howell, a member of the administrative staff of Catholic University, and will be in Maine when the convention opens.

Another bride-to-be is Helen Prentiss, who is to be married July 8 to Peter Cullinane.

Now, as to vacations, Mary Agnes Brown will go to The Hague to attend the Comparative Law Conference; Judge Marion Harran, of the senior association, leaves next week for California to spend two months; Helen Goodner will be sailing for a trip to Guatemala; Beatrice Clephane is leaving Thursday for Massachusetts to spend a month, and Helen Dolan is sailing Friday aboard the Franconia for a seven-week tour of Europe.

Women End Meetings of Federation

D. C. Taxation Discussed at Final Session Until Fall.

Equal Suffrage Is Asked for Ecuador in Resolution.

IT WAS A DAY OF resolutions at the final meeting of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs at the Roosevelt Hotel yesterday. Taxation in the District, the traffic situation and suffrage for the women of Ecuador all came in for attention.

The action favoring a selective sales tax followed a talk by Mr. Robert J. Cottrell, of the Board of Trade, explaining the hardship which would be imposed on residents and business concerns of the District by the measure now before Congress. That on traffic followed the recommendation of the Joint Civic Committee, urging a study of the situation, with emphasis on determination of causes of traffic congestion and proposals for remedies.

The resolution urging President Frederico Paez, of Ecuador, to "see to it that the right of the women of Ecuador to vote be safeguarded in the forthcoming revision of the constitution in August, 1937," was similar to resolutions which have been passed by women's organizations throughout the country. It was sponsored by Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, a past president of the federation, who for many years has been one of the leading champions of the cause of equal rights.

Ask Vote for D. C. Citizens.

The resolution points out that members of the federation are "working for the vote for citizens of this District of Columbia, Capital City of the United States, where both men and women are voteless, and know full well what a dire harship it is to be taxed without the opportunity to vote for those who administer the taxes."

The adjustment of street car fares was discussed by Mr. William McKay Clayton, of the public utilities committee. Mrs. E. Morgan Pryse was in charge of the program.

Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, president of the federation, presided during the morning and afternoon sessions and the resolutions were presented by Mrs. L. E. Waterman, chairman of the resolutions committee. There was also a memorial service for 50 members of the federation who have died during the year. Mrs. John Frizzell was in charge, assisted by Mrs. Ernest H. Daniel and Mrs. Ruth N. Snodgrass, who sang "Resignation," by Caro Roma.

A report of the meeting of the council of the General Federation of Women's Clubs at Tulsa was read by Mrs. Wiley, who also displayed souvenirs of her trip to Mexico City, where she went following the Tulsa session.

Prize Picture Presented.

Mrs. Lloyd A. Morrison, chairman of the penny art fund of the District Federation, presented the picture given as a prize for the largest contribution to the fund, to the Political Study Club, whose new president, Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt, and outgoing president, Mrs. Tilman B. Parks, were present. The painting is a winter scene in Rock Creek Park, by Mrs. Irene Trowbridge, who is a member of the Entre Nous Club. Next season, the award is to be made on the basis of the largest contribution per capita, thus giving the smaller clubs in the District a better opportunity to compete for it.

Just before the morning session adjourned for luncheon, Prof. Fulton Kerr, a cousin of Mrs. Biddle, played the music he has written as a setting to a poem on Washington by Byrd Mock.

The federation is planning a picnic for women of the WPA sewing project, in conjunction with the Wednesday Club of the Y. W. C. A., on Wednesday afternoon, when the refreshments will be provided by the club women.

Yesterday's meeting closed the sessions of the federation until fall.

D. A. R. Presents Marker in Va.

Chapter Dedicates Tablet at Martha Washington Birthplace.

ANOTHER LINK was added yesterday to the chain of national shrines, when the Martha Washington Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, dedicated a bronze tablet at Chestnut Grove, the birthplace of Martha Washington.

In celebration of the 206th anniversary of her birth, more than 100 D. A. R.'s motored to New Kent County, Va., 56 miles southeast of Richmond. They were received by the Martha Dandridge Woman's Club at the Old Stage Tavern, built in 1690, at New Kent Court House. Luncheon was served in the ancient white dining room where handhewn tables and benches and horn-handled silverware are still in use.

Three miles beyond, at Chestnut Grove, Eleanor (Nellie) Custis Peter, 5-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Parke Custis Peter, of Westfield, N. J., and direct descendant of Patsy Dandridge Custis (Martha Washington), unveiled the historic marker. It was presented to Mrs. W. C. Smith, the present owner of the estate, by Mrs. Eugene L. Culver, regent of Martha Washington Chapter, here.

Mrs. Byrn W. Graves, president of the Martha Dandridge Woman's Club, presented the chapter with a picture of Martha Washington and a gavel made from native dogwood cut at Chestnut Grove.

The house in which Patsy Dandridge was born burned about ten years ago and has not been restored, but the old servant quarters and kitchen remain.

Among those attending the celebration were Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, State regent of the District of Columbia; Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, honorary president general; Mrs. Alexander H. Bell, Miss Luella Chase, Mrs. L. R. Pennington, Mrs. James Henry Harper, Mrs. John Parke Custis Peter, Dr. E. W. Thompson, president of Martha Washington Seminary, Miss Sara S. Beach Attempts to Pick 'Big Shots' Taken in Spring Raids.

Indictments against 50 Washington gamblers arrested during the wholesale raids of last spring will be returned by the present session of the grand jury, according to Assistant United States Attorney Samuel F. Beach yesterday.

While the grand jury is still taking testimony and the exact number of indictments it will bring is not exactly known, Beach said it would probably reach the record number of 50. Returns will become known July 2.

Beach stated that sufficient evidence had not been obtained to convict many of those arrested, but declared he was expecting to bring to trial most of the "big shots" of the huge illicit gaming business here.

140 Taken at Once.

Largest haul last winter was on April 3 when 140 persons were taken into custody by United States marshals and Washington police in a swift and simultaneous blow at Ninth street gambling houses. In one billard parlor 57 persons were taken.

So large were the captures during the drive, police were too busy hustling their captives into patrol wagons to ascertain just what connection, if any, they had with the gambling racket. The District Attorney's office is therefore concentrating on seeking indictments of those whom it believes guilty of conducting games.

Daily Turnover $40,000.

United States Commissioner Needham Turnage yesterday said that he understood some of the leading figures in the business here would be indicted. He added that to date fewer than ten dismissals of charges had been requested by the District attorney.

Another big raid last spring was staged on March 16 when 64 were arrested. The week previous 83 persons were seized. It is estimated the daily turnover in money among 100 known bookmakers and policy vendors here is $40,000.

Mrs. Tiernan Sentenced To 20 Years to Life

Riverhead, N. Y., June 21 (AP).—Mrs. Helen Tiernan was sentenced today to 20 years to life imprisonment for slaying her daughter, Helen, 7.

Mrs. Tiernan made no statement. She pleaded guilty Thursday to second degree murder. The 28-year-old embroiderer attacked her daughter, Helen, in a wood, killing her, and attempting to kill her son, Jimmy, 5, by beating, slashing and burning. Mrs. Tiernan said her attack on the children was prompted by a desire to be free to carry on a love affair with a Greek waiter.

Officer Weeps After Acquittal In Ticket Trial

All 4 Charges Dismissed; Not Winfield's Fault, Says Prosecutor.

Apologies, handshakes and tears ended the "ticket-fixing" trial of Policeman Welford E. Winfield yesterday as he was acquitted on four counts alleging unauthorized cancellation of traffic violation notices.

Three weeks of conflicting testimony failed to produce evidence Winfield improperly "adjusted" tickets during his assignment to the police traffic division.

Said Edward W. Welliver, assistant corporatoin counsel, who prosecuted the case:

"I am convinced that if there exists any fault, the fault is not that of Winfield."

Two of the counts against Winfield—one charging "fixing" and the other accusing him of keeping official records at his home—were dismissed by the Trial Board at Welliver's request.

Dismissal of the other two charges—alleging failure to make records of certain "adjustments" and distribution of so-called courtesy cards "without proper authority"—came after additional testimony later in the day.

As Inspector Edward J. Kelly, chairman of the Police Trial Board, announced the "not guilty" verdict, Winfield hurriedly left the hearing room daubing his eyes with a handkerchief. With tears still on his cheeks, he returned a moment later to shake hands all around.

Welliver said the "bottom dropped out of his case" when Inspector B. A. Lamb, former traffic supervisor, and Lieut. Walter H. Thomas, former traffic records chief, testified Winfield had "full authority" to adjust tickets and keep official records at his home.

Half-Pint Hens of Sumatra Threaten U. S. Omelet Crisis

Washington Zoo Director Bringing Back Specimens of Tiny Maleos Which Lay Eggs Ten Times Larger Than American Brand.

A new kind of omelet will have to be devised by American cooks, and frying pan manufacturers will face a weighty problem when Dr. William Mann gets back from Sumatra with a coopful of maleos.

A maleo is a South Sea chicken half as large as our hens which lays eggs ten times as big as our biddies, according to the National Geographic Society-Smithsonian Institution, which is sponsoring Dr. Mann's wild-animal hunt. The director of the Washington Zoo has some other spectacular fauna, too.

Tree kangaroos, wild pigs, dwarf buffalo, a dozen beautiful birds of paradise of four different species, many monkeys and several pythons, huge snakes which squeeze their prey to death, are among the other creatures which the leader of the expedition is collecting to bring back for the National Zoological Park in Washington.

Dr. Mann and his assistants, aided by local scientists and animal collectors, have been scouring the tropical islands of the Netherlands East Indies for strange and rare animals, birds and snakes, many of which never have been exhibited in the United States. Besides the creatures already mentioned they have collected cassowaries, large ostrich-like birds; several specimens of the cuscus, an animal with a prehensile tail like a 'possum; parrots, lizards, snakes and pigeons.

The bill of fare for this menagerie en route by boat to the expedition's base camp at Siantar, Sumatra, included 700 bananas a day, boiled rice by the bucketful, many sacks of grass, baskets of Indian corn and large quantities of beans, papayas, sweet potatoes and birdseed.

Dr. Mann reported that he has a good cross-section of the wild animals, birds and reptiles of the eastern islands of the East Indies, including Celebes, the Moluccas and Ceram. A few specimens also have been obtained from New Guinea.

Every effort is being made to keep the wild creatures in good health. The expedition plans to collect more animals on the west coast of Sumatra and in Siam.

The damp, humid climate of the East Indies, which lie along the equator, is rusting locks and hinges on the expedition's trunks, making traveling bags, shoes and cameras moldy, and even growing fungus on camera lenses, but Dr. Maynard Owen Williams, staff representative of the National Geographic Society, is overcoming these handicaps and making many still and motion pictures of the trip.

With Dr. Mann and Dr. Williams are Mrs. Mann, herself an expert handler of animals, birds and insects, and Malcolm Davis and Roy Jennier, keepers from the National Zoological Park.

Philatelists Urge Beautiful Stamps

American postage stamps should be "things of beauty," Philatelists said yesterday at their national conference with Government officials.

"Postage stamps are the traveling representatives of this country to all parts of the world," said Don A. Grieve, stamp editor of the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Secretary of the Interior Ickes pleaded for stamps that will reflect present events as well as the past.

Union Pact Frees 7 New York Ships

New York, June 21 (AP).—An agreement reached at a corridor informal conference in the State Building resulted today in the release of seven Eastern Steamship Co. ships held in port by a jurisdictional dispute between two maritime unions.

Joseph Curran, head of the National Maritime Union, announced the settlement which he said was reached with the International Seamens Union pending designation by the National Labor Relations Board of the collective bargaining agent for employes of nearly 80 steamship lines serving Atlantic and Gulf Coast ports.

Release of the seven Eastern ships followed upon a declaration by Alton Sharp, president of the steamship line which operates from Virginia to Nova Scotia, that his company "could not continue to exist" if strike conditions continued to prevail.

Bob Burns Says:

Some men never would do a thing if they didn't have a wife to drive 'em.

My Uncle Dewey Durp was like that. When Aunt Nettie got a headache and started whinin', Uncle Dewey would rush to the 'phone and call the doctor right away, but one mornin' Aunt Nettie woke up with the lockjaw and Uncle Dewey's true nature come out. He says "Well, I'll call the doctor, but I want to be sure and get the right one, and I can always think better when I'm sittin' on a bank fishin'."

When he got home that night he was purty tired and he says "I think I'll wait and call the Doc in in the mornin'." So next mornin' he got up at ten o'clock and he called the doctor after he'd had his breakfast. He says, "Doc, my wife's got a bad case of the lockjaw and if you happen to be out in this neighborhood in the next week or so, you might drop in."

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

The Government Standard, publication of the A. F. G. E., has a discreetly worded editorial which somehow seems to fit into the groove of the present unrestful condition of some of the lodges. The article is titled: "Some Things Can't Be Hurried," and says in opening:

"Experience shows that many Government employes do not realize sufficiently that the terms of their employment are governed by laws and regulations which are not the arbitrary acts of supervisory officials, but the result of deliberations of Congress, or of interpretations of laws enacted by Congress."

"Nothing," says the editorial, "can be gained by extra-legal methods, and there are no short cuts where laws and regulations having the force of law govern employment.

"When regulations or interpretations of law appear to be unfair, the remedy is to revise the regulations or to obtain new interpretations. That is not always an easy or speedy process. Employes can get some idea of what it is like if they will consider the procedure they must adopt if they want to change some ordinance of their own city."

The A. F. G. E., the editorial states, has found administrative officers, "for the most part fair-minded and ready to remedy injustices wherever possible. But administrative officers can no more set aside laws and regulations governing personnel than individuals can set aside the Ten Commandments. The important thing is that when injustices based on laws and regulations are remedied, they are remedied for keeps."

In other words, the A. F. G. E. leaders are contending—as they have consistently contended—that you can't always take the bull by the horns and throw it down. Just now, however, there seems to be considerable opinion to the contrary.

Immense apparently was a new word for the 6-year-old daughter, for she misunderstood and exclaimed indignantly: 'I don't care if it is a mess. It's awful pretty, anyhow.'"

Citizens' Group Plans Fight for D.C. Autonomy

Mass Meeting Will Be Held Next Week to Launch Drive.

A mass meeting which, its sponsors hope, will launch a citizens movement for local self-government will be held at the Fifth Precinct Police Station next Tuesday night.

William A. Maio, president of the Southeast Washington Citizens Association, which has called the meeting, last night announced that Republican and Democratic leaders in the District have promised to attend and that prospects are bright for formation of a central organization to conduct the enfranchisement campaign.

The specific purpose of next Tuesday's assembly, he said, is to discuss the District autonomy plan, which he submitted May 26 to the Senate sub-committee handling the 1938 District appropriation bill.

At that time Maio recommended passage by Congress of an enabling act creating a District council, which would have legislative jurisdiction over all local matters. The council would have 13 elected members, 1 from each of the Capital's 12 police precincts, except No. 11, largest in area, which would have 2 representatives.

The council president would be elected from the entire District and would not have voting privileges, save in a tie. Five yeads local residence prior to the election would be a requisite for candidacy for all prospective members. Nominations would be by petition, without regard to political affiliations.

At least two years residence in the District would be required to vote, with those residents barred who had voting privileges elsewhere.

The plan recommended by Maio further provides for council salaries of $5,000 a year, elections to be held every three years; reorganizatoin of the Board of Public Welfare and popular election of members of the Board of Education.

6,000 Women Of D. C. Favor Levy on Sales

Nearly 6,000 women, through their representatives in the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, yesterday voiced their approval of a selective sales tax as opposed to an income tax, an increased real estate tax or a business license tax on District residents.

"We think a sales tax would hit the Congressmen, their secretaries, convention visitors, tourists and everyone else who derives benefits from the city," commented Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, past president and District director of the federation.

A resolution supporting the tax was passed at yesterday's regular meeting of the federation, which includes 30 women's clubs.

Smaller Price Rise.

Expanding her fellow members' point of view, Mrs. Wiley contended that a business license tax would increase prices more than a sales tax, in that it would affect wholesale as well as retail transactions.

The proposed chain store tax, she maintained, besides raising the cost of food, would put many shops out of business within a week and thus force women to walk perhaps ten blocks rather than three to do their marketing.

Robert Cotrell, of the Board of Trade, spoke at the meeting yesterday. He told the members that Washington receives $5,000,000 from the Government, which is less than many other cities get in Federal grants.

"Injustice" Stressed.

The resolution stressed the "injustice" of the financial relationship between the Federal Government and the District.

"Congress has for 15 years ignored its own act of June 29, 1922, providing that 40 per cent of the cost of the Federal City should be borne by the National Government," it said.

"Since 1934 Congress has only contributed 21 per cent of its share," the document reads.

In urging Congress to enact a sales tax, the resolution points out that similar levies are made in 23 States and that the tax has been recommended by the Federation of Citizens' Associations, the Board of Trade and the Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

Night School Graduates Hear Sen. Lee Plead for Honest Work

Diplomas Are Presented by Gratz E. Dunkum, of Board of Education, at Exercises in McKinley High School.

Action, not self-pitying, wishful thinking, speels success in a highly mechanized and efficient world, Senator Josh Lee, of Oklahoma, told the graduating classes of Washington's public night schools at exercises in McKinley High School auditorium last night.

In an address punctuated with wit and humor, Lee told the students their successes—or failures—rested for the most part upon their initiative and ability to cope with reality.

"You must work for success," he asserted. "For success, honesty and work are the answer.

"There is no short cut to getting what you want. Short cuts lead to short results.

"Dig for your pot of gold. Scratch when you find there is a definite itching for success."

Money is a means to an end, Senator Lee said, pointing out that honor was infinitely more important than the amassing of wealth.

In the course of his address, Senator Lee cited the careers of great Americans who came from humble beginnings to dominate the national scene.

Presiding officer in the auditorium where the students were presented with their diplomas was Edward J. Lockwood, director of the evening and summer schools.

Music was furnished by the McKinley High School orchestra, and invocation and benediction were delivered by the Rev. Eddy L. Ford, director of religious education at Foundry Methodist Church.

The addresses of welcome were made by Izez Inez V. Lichtenberger, president of the elementary class, and by John S. Rawlings, president of the high school class.

Gratz E. Dunkum, member of the Board of Education, presented diplomas.

House Approves Bill Authorizing Antietam Coins

The House yesterday passed a bill to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces in commemoration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Battle of Antietam. The Senate previously had adopted the measure.

Only a few minor amendments remain to be adjusted between the Senate and the House before the bill goes to the White House for the President's signature.

The act authorizes the coinage of not to exceed 50,000 of the coins and specifies that they shall be issued only upon the request of the Washington County Historical Society of Hagerstown, Md.

The society may, with the approval of the Director of the Mint, sell the coins at a premium and use the net proceeds to defray expenses incidental to the commemoration of the battle next September.

Gov. Hurley Wants U.S. To Own Reserve Board

Boston, June 21 (AP).—Delegates attending the fortieth annual convention of the National Retail Grocers tonight considered a proposal that the Government "take over the control and ownership of the Federal Reserve Board."

The proposal was offered by Gov. Charles F. Hurley of Massachusetts, who suggested federalization of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation policies for expansion of credit.

Descendant of Former Vice President Killed

Beauvais, France, June 21 (AP).—The Hon. Thomas Sharon Fermorhesketh, 26, and Lieut. Ludford Astley, 22, were killed today when their airplane crashed near the village of Martin.

Hesketh, the heir of Lord Hesketh, was a great-grandson of J. C. Breckinridge, Vice President of the United States from 1857 to 1861. The two men, both officers in the Second Battalion of Scots Guards, were on a flying tour of France.

Brown Demands Police Enforce Firecracker Ban

Police Chief Ernest W. Brown yesterday reminded the men under his command it is a violation of law to discharge firecrackers in the District.

Maj. Brown, in a formal order, stated:

"The department receives complaints each year as the Fourth of July approaches of annoyance caused by the discharge of fireworks in the District of Columbia, and it is noted that there are numerous violations of this regulation at this time.

"You will see that this regulation is strictly enforced and give special attention to outlying districts, where the violations are most prevalent. All supervising officers will give this matter special attention with a view of reducing the annoyance to a minimum this year."

The regulation cited by Maj. Brown listed the following types of fireworks that are not prohibited: Sparklers, torches, box fires, fountains, dipsticks, nonpoisonous snakes, colored lights, toy pistols of the friction type and toy pistols of the automatic type.

'Blackface' Bandit Faces Term In Alcatraz for Holdup Series

Prosecution for a series of robberies that may send him to Alcatraz, in San Francisco Bay, was faced last night by Walter Forbush, 24-year-old "blackface" bandit, whose companion, Martin J. Walsh, 35, was shot to death in Baltimore when he resisted arrest Sunday.

Forbush was brought from Baltimore to the Twelfth Precinct station, Tonight he will appear in a police lineup.

Before being speeded here he appeared at a coroner's inquest into the death of Walsh in Baltimore.

"Well," said he, "we were leaving a cafe, when Martin Walsh said to me, 'Watch out, here come the dicks,' and then there were shots."

Forbush added he did not know the automobile in which he and Walsh tried to make their getaway had been stolen from Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi.

"We'd have left that car where Senator Harrison could have found it," he said.

Meanwhile Detective Capt. Ira Keck said Walsh and Forbush were definitely connected with at least five other robberies of liquor stores and cafes since their escape from Lorton, April 22.

He advanced the theory the only safe place to keep the gangster was Alcatraz.

Police brought here the guns of Forbush and his dead companion; Senator Harrison's automobile and a device which they said the bandit pair used to set up a smoke screen.

U.S. Control Of Trolleys Is Threatened

Clayton Plans Appeal Unless 5-Cent Fare Is Established..

House Inquiry, to Open Today, Will Take Up Finance Setup.

An apeal for Government control and operation of Washington's street railway system was threatened yesterday by William McK. Clayton, chairman of the public utilities committee, Federation of Citizens Associations, unless the Capital Transit Co. agrees to a 5-cent cash fare.

An inquiry into operations on the transit company, ordered by the House District Committee, will begin at 9:30 a. m. today on Capitol Hill.

Representative Randolph (Democrat), West Virginia, chairman of the sub-committee in charge, announced yesterday the investigation will go into the financial setup of the company as well as the question of fares.

Prettyman Retained.

Before the sub-committee are two bills introduced by Representative Dirksen (Republican), Illinois. One proposes two-man operation of all street cars and buses, while the other seeks to limit the cash fare to 7 cents.

E. Barrett Prettyman, former corporation counsel, has been retained by the transit company to defend it before the sub-committee.

At yesterday's transit company valuation hearing, the Public Utilities Commission authorized a study of possible revenue results should a 5-cent fare be established.

At Clayton's request, the commission, directed its chief engineer, Fred A. Sager, to undertake a thorough survey of the controversial proposal. Sager will attempt to determine what effect the decreased fare would have on revenues of the transit company.

Heberle Plans Study.

"Control by the Government is better than what we have now," Clayton said.

J. E. Heberle, vice president and comptroller of the traction company, agreed to conduct a similar study of the 5-cent fare proposal in order to give the P. U. C. the benefit of comparative analysis.

Heberle said he could not conceive of "any fare based on 5 cents that will produce the necessary operating revenues." The company has requested authority to increase the price of tokens from four for 30 cents to four for 35 cents, retaining the 10-cent cash fare.

For Information.

The 5-cent fare studies, Riley Elgen, P. U. C. chairman, said, will be merely for the information of those interested.

Heberle said he would base his study on a plan of paid transfers. A 5-cent fare with a charge for transfers, he said, would produce more revenue than a straight cash rate.

It was also suggested consideration be given to the increased number of passengers if the fare is lowered.

Federal Bar Group Growth Is Planned

At a meting of the membership committee of the Federal Bar Association, the chairman, Heber H. Rice, announced that plans are being perfected to expand the organization and extend its membership from coast to coast.

It was pionted out that the membership of the Federal Bar Association now numbers more than 700 attorneys who are engaged in performing legal work for the United States Government in the several departments and bureaus.

A charter has been granted to the Philadelphia branch of the Association and preparations are under way to establish branches in New York, Chicago, Cincinnati, San Francisco, Omaha, Nashville, and other key cities of the country.

Miss A. E. Schaeffer Dies at Home Here

Miss Elizabeth Annie Schaeffer, 68, died yesterday at her home, 818 F street southwest, after a long period of ill-health. Miss Schaeffer was a resident of Washington for many years, working in the map division of the Government Printing Office. She was a native of Baltimore, Md.

Surviving are a sister, Matilda Schaeffer, and four brothers, Jacob, Frederick, Henry and William. All are residents of Washington except Henry and William Schaeffer, who live in Capitol Heights, Md. The funeral will be Thursday morning at her late residence, with burial in the Loudon Park Cemetery, Baltimore.

Emil Ludwig Finds Roosevelt His Most Interesting Subject

'President Difficult Man to Understand,' Says German Exile.

Emil Ludwig completed the second lap of his newest adventure in biography yesterday afternoon when he visited President Roosevelt at the White House.

He decided to write a life of the President after their first meeting in 1935. After they talked together yesterday Ludwig felt confident his present study would be among the most difficult and most interesting he has tried.

Earlier in the day, at his apartment in the Wardman Park Hotel, Ludwig welcomed a reporter and opened the interview with an offer to give a lesson in the art of interviewing.

Wearing a gray and red pajama jacket in place of coat, he mentioned whisky and soda, cigarettes, then turned to tell of his own experience of interviewing, of his three-week session with Mussolini.

Talks on Other Subjects.

"You should not start by asking me about biography," he said. "With Mussolini I talked about music, literature. That way you learn more about the man. In his own field his talk will be more closely guarded. Always I learn more from the interviewer than he learns from me."

Ludwig was eager to begin his assignment on Roosevelt. "When I first met him, I saw him as a very interesting man, one difficult to understand. Roosevelt is interesting to Europe as a fighter for new forms in society. Roosevelt, like Edison, tries to work his own way out of present struggle. A great character must follow his impulse, or he is dead."

His greatest objection to Roosevelt from the standpoint of biography is that he is alive. The difficulty he finds is that all of the documents necessary in writing a biographical study are not available when the subject is still living.

Ludwig thinks of himself less as a biographer than as a portrait painter. For two years while writing about Lincoln, he kept Lincoln's picture on his desk. His study of Cleopatra, to be published in December, was written with one eye on her picture as photographed from an ancient Roman coin. "It is these faces that I write about," he said.

EMIL LUDWIG.

"It is the character in the face that gives a start to understanding the whole psychological situation."

Fliers, Blum Interesting.

Ludwig found the most interesting news in the day in the three Russian fliers and in the resignation of his friend, Premier Blum.

At 56 Ludwig is studying Russian to help in learning about the situation there when he returns. Although he has interviewed Stalin and other members of the Russian government, he has found interpreters inadequate. "When I talk with the leaders or with the laborers and farmers, it is necessary to know what their eyes and mouth say together."

Although he is familiar with four languages, he writes only in German, and usually at his country home in Switzerland. He objected to classification as an exile from Germany. "I have been a Swiss longer than Hitler has been a German," he said.

Father Maguire Sees Unions as Extremist Bar

Precaution Against Reds and Fascists, He Says in Lecture.

Union organization is a precaution against communism and fascism, the Rev. J. W. R. Maguire yesterday told the Institute on Industry, which is meeting this week at the National Catholic School of Social Service.

In the first of a series of six lectures, Father Maguire traced the evolution of modern labor problems. Speaking of the position of women in industry, he maintained that in an indirect way they are still fulfilling their traditional function of providing food and clothing for the race.

He is a member of the faculty of St. Viator's College, Bourbonnais, Ill.

Dr. George Brown, of Seton Hill College, Greensburg, Pa., addressed the women on the subject of social legislation. In defense of what some call the interference of the church in social problems, Dr. Brown pointed out that the popes have always held the temporal welfare of men as important to right living as their spiritual welfare.

Last night Miss Agnes C. Regan, executive secretary of the National Council of Catholic Women, which is sponsoring the institute, spoke on the value of such discussions. Miss Linna E. Bresette, consultant for the N. C. C. W. Industrial Relations committee, spoke earlier in the day.

This morning Father Maguire and Dr. Brown will continue their talks and Miss Bertha Von Nienburg of the Department of Labor Woman's Bureau will lead a round table discussion on legislation for women in industry. Sister Vincent Ferrer also will lead a discussion.

This afternoon the women attending the institute will tour the city and have a picnic supper in Rock Creek Park. In the evening Dr. Elizabeth Morrissey will lecture on "The Development of Present Social Trends Based on the Encyclicals."

Hagerstown May Allow Fishing in Park Lake

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, June 21.—Mayor W. Lee Elgin is considering the permitting of fishing by juveniles in city park lake here as a means of eliminating the lake odor.

Two days each week would be set aside for children under 15 years of age and the lake would be stocked with trout, perch and other game fish when the present supply became depleted.

Many protests have been received recently from residents on one side of the lake because of the odor, which is said to be due to the many fish in the lake.

Farm Credit Employes Participate in Barbecue

More than 500 members of the staff of the Farm Credit Administration, enrolled as members of the Farm Credit Club, marshaled by Gov. William I. Myers and Deputy Governors Hill, Esgate and Emmerich, participated in a barbecue at Glen Echo Park last evening.

Commissioners Sanders and General Counsel Evans also were in attendance.

Thieves in Day Net $4,500 in Cash and Loot

Series of House and Shop Burglaries Reported to Police.

Thieves and highwaymen escaped with cash and loot worth more than $4,500 in a series of housebreakings and robberies early yesterday.

Largest of these burglaries was staged in the D. J. Kaufmn Clothing Store, 1005 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, when clothing, jewelry and electric shavers valued at $3,771.50 were stolen.

The theft was reported to police by Oscar I. Dodek, the manager, said the intruders entered through a skylight.

Two electric calculating machines valued at more than $600 were stolen from the Interior Department Building, Twenty-first and C streets northwest. Woods W. Rogers, investigator for the National Parks Service, reported the case to police.

Two colored men robbed James A. Nelson, a cab driver, of $6 early yesterday in an alley in the rear of the first block of K street southeast.

Yeggmen escaped with $200 in cash early yesterday after they broke open a safe in the Loft Candy Co. Shop, 1103 H street northeast.

24th St. Housing Project Supported

Continued efforts to push early completion of a $93,140 24-unit apartment project planned by the Alley Dwelling Authority on Twenty-fourth street between G and H streets northwest was voted at a meeting of the Lincoln Citizens Association last night in Liberty Baptist Church.

The association also voted to continue its efforts to have other tracts where property has been torn down rebuilt as quickly as possible to relieve housing shortage for colored residents.

Auditorium Advisers See Building Sketches

Meeting in executive session, the Capital auditorium advisory committee yesterday inspected several architectural sketches for the proposed municipal auditorium which were drafted under supervision of Louis A. Simon, supervising architect of the Treasury.

Although C. Marshall Finnan, chairman of the advisory group, withheld other information on the closed meeting, it is believed that a report was presented on the uses and financial affairs of auditoria in the larger Eastern and Midwest cities.

D. C. Abattoir Is Called Bar To Housing

Adverse Testimony Is Given as House Group Opens Hearings.

N. Y. Developers Would Be Denied Insurance, Official Says.

A witness's statement that erection and operation of a slaughter-house on Benning road northeast would kill plans for a $2,000,000 housing development nearby featured the opening of House District Committee hearings yesterday on Chairman Mary T. Norton's "nuisance industry" bill.

Additional arguments against the abattoir project of Adolf Gobel, Inc., New York meat packers, will be heard when the hearings are resumed at 10 a. m. today. Opponents of the bill afterward will take the stand.

Federal Housing Administration insurance will be denied the National Insured Homes Corporation, sponsor of the low-cost dwellings project in Anacostia, if the abattoir goes up, the committee was told by Myron Davy.

Vice president and general manager of the NIHC, Davy testified:

"We are not asking protection for ourselves, but I think what we are proposing to do in the area will be far more important than the operation of a slaughterhouse."

Would Build 800 Houses.

The corporation, he said, proposes to build 800 to 1,000 brick row houses on a 65-acre tract which is about 300 yards from the intersection of Benning and Anacostia roads, site of the abattoir which Gobel seeks to erect.

Asked why his concern had purchased the land in view of the slaughterhouse risk, Davy replied he had been "unofficially assured" that the Benning road plant never would be returned to operation.

Others heard yesterday in support of the Norton bill, companion of the one introduced in the Senate by Chairman William H. King, of the District Committee, were Howard A. Gray, chief of the PWA housing division; Elwood H. Seal, corporation counsel; Thomas S. Settle, secretary of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission; C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks; Mrs. Elizabeth T. Sullivan, Federation of Citizens Associations; Miss Harlean James, executive secretary of the American Planning and Civic Association; Campbell C. Johnson, Washington Housing Association, and Mrs. Margaret Hopkins Worrell, Columbia Heights Citizens Association.

Calls Bill Constitutional.

Gray's testimony was essentially the same he presented to the Senate sub-committee which considered the King bill, namely, that the Gobel enterprise would be detrimental to the Langston Terrace colored housing project, which is nearing completion just across the river.

Corporation Counsel Seal said the "nuisance industry" measure was constitutional and its passage desirable.

The measure was upheld as a salutary amendment to the Capital's zoning laws by Settle. Finnan's testimony stressed the damaging influence which, he said, the abattoir would have upon park and recreational values in the community. He also read a report, prepared by the Public Health Service and made public several weeks ago, which indicated operation of the abattoir would necessitate enlargement of the District's new $4,000,000 sewage disposal plant.

Mrs. Sullivan, who lives at 1319 Thirty-first street northwest, testified as vice chairman of the public health committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations. She charged the abattoir would be the source of unpleasant odors which would have an injurious effect on the health of Anacostia residents.

Miss James argued passage of the King-Norton legislation was vital to success of the Anacostia improvement program which is now under way.

Indorsement of the proposed Benning abattoir was voted last night by the Lincoln Park Citizens Association at a meeting in Bryan School. The association opposed the bill pending in Congress which would bar the abattoir as "confiscation of established business." It was pointed out that location of the abattoir at Benning would put 250 men to work and take them off the

Notable Group Of Film Plays Go to Cameras

Warner BrothersAnnounce Partial List of Titles for Next Fall.

Active preparations are under way at Warner Bros. Studios on the West Coast for a series of outstanding productions, all of which will be before cameras in the near future. According to dispatches received from the Coast by John J. Payette, general zone manager for the Washington territory, casts have been outlined and general preshooting details completed on seven important films.

Two of the productions will be in Technicolor, "The Adventures of Robin Hood," with Errol Flynn in the title role and Olivia de Havilland as Maid Marian, and "Gold Is Where You Find it," with George Brent and Miss De Havilland. William Keighley will direct the former production; Michael Curtiz the latter.

A Broadway stage success, "Tovarich," will present Claudette Colbert, Charles Boyer and Basil Rathbone in the three important roles. This production will be under the direction of Anatole Litvak, noted European director.

Technical scenes already have been made at New London, Conn., for "Submarine D-1," in which Lloyd Bacon will direct Pat O'Brien, Wayne (Galahad) Morris and Gloria Dickson.

"Hollywood Hotel" will reunite a popular pair of stars—Dick Powell and Ginger Rogers—in a tuneful production to be directed by Busby Berkeley.

Mervyn LeRoy will make "The Great Garrick" as one of his most ambitious productions. Brian Aherne will have the title role, and other members of the cast will be Olivia de Haviland, Edward Everett Horton, Lana Turner, Luis Alberni, Marie Wilson and Linda Perry. James Whale will direct.

Kay Francis will appear in "Comet Over Broadway," which Stanley Logan will direct.

From all indications, next fall should bring a series of excellent films to the Earle and Metropolitan screens.

'Dumb' Dancer May Be Signed

Hollywood, June 21 (U.P.).—Found—in real life—the girl Gracie Allen pretends to be on the screen.

She is Suzanne Ridgeway, 18, brunette, beautiful, born in France, raised in Santa Monica; and now a dancer in Leroy Prinz's front line, with a ribbon tied round her wrist to remind her which is the right hand.

"You know, Mr. Prinz," said Suzanne while rehearsing a routine for "This Way, Please," "I'm your best dancer. I'm always a step ahead." Suzanne explains her nationality by saying: "I'm French on my mother's side, English on my father's side, and Scotch on my stepfather's side."

Don't Need Horn.

Other day, according to Prinz, she went horseback riding for the first time, and was asked what kind of a saddle she wanted—a flat English type, or a Western saddle with horn.

"Oh," she replied, "I guess the English saddle will do. I'm going up in the hills where there isn't much traffic, and won't need a horn."

Posing for stills, she was asked to register surprise, but objected: "You never showed me how to do that, Mr. Prinz."

"Of course," said Prinz, with heavy sarcasm, "you know we are going to teach you how to act and pay you, too."

"Yes, I know," chirped Suzanne, "and I think it's very nice of you."

Someone asked how she keeps her admirable figure, and Suzanne giggled and replied "Oh, I don't know. I just eat anything"

"Do you eat fish?"

Must Be Fresh.

"Yes, but only on Friday. I like fish fresh, and I've heard that fishermen fish only on Thursdays."

Either it's all an act, or Suzanne is the perfect "Dumb Bell." If it is an act, it's a mighty good one.

Paramount may sign her to a small stock contract, and Samuel Goldwyn wants her to pose for a statue of the "1937 Goldwin girl" to go with "Goldwin Follies."

If Suzanne can maintain the pace, she may end up a big shot, although she says: I don't want to be a big star—just a little medium sized one."

When asked what she thought of the late coronation, Suzanne exclaimed: "Oh, yes, I sat up all night and didn't miss a word. I was thrilled to death, because I missed it the year before."

"But Suzanne," objected Prinz, "they don't hold a coronation every year."

"Oh, I know now, It's every four years, isn't it?

Twentieth-Century Starts Film Abroad

Hollywood, June 21.—Plans have been completed at the Twentieth Century-Fox English studios, in Denham, near London, for an early start of "Follow the Sun," starring Annabella, charming French star of "Wings of the Morning" and "Under the Red Robe." The picture is a comedy-drama written by Roland Pertwee. Paul Lukas and Romney Brent have the male leading roles.

The picture will have extensive production treatment. In addition to interior sequences filmed at Denham, it will include location scenes made at Paris, Cannes, Monte Carlo, the Lido and Deauville.

Upon completion of "Follow the Sun," Annabella will come to Hollywood for her next Twentieth Century-Fox picture.

The Roadside.

Encumbered with one of those long, double-barreled titles that were the vogue in remote generations of the theater, "The Wizard of the Wave, or the Ship of the Avenger," last night opened the second week of its fortnight's run at the Roadside Theater, out on the Rockville Pike. Since its premiere performance in the "old red barn" a week ago, the rugged and slightly grotesque old melodrama has been speeded up in action and considerably curtailed in running time.

This may not be the most dramatically exciting of all the old "mellers" in which the Roadsiders have specialized, but it certainly is the most picturesque. Staged in three acts and 10 scenes, it provides opportunity for a wide variety of settings, even if the settings—owing to the limitations of the stage—are not very wide; a colorful display of costumes, reflecting the flamboyant hues favored by the natives of St. Jago, Chile, and even permits the introduction of occasional songs and dances, a novelty for this acting group.

The story concerns itself belligerently with twin brothers, one a paragon of all the virtues and the other a renegade; the pilfering of a gold mine, the unhappy life of the Governor, the rhapsodic romances of his daughter and the usual vicious plots of rebellious ships' crews who go in for violence in the grand manner. There is comedy sprinkled through the three acts and many of the lines are amusingly grandiose and stilted. There are plenty of chances for those out front to hiss or to cheer, or both, as they feel moved.

The cast is one of the most numerous ever recruited for a Roadside play. Denis E. Connell contributes one of his characteristically polished characterizations as Don Jose del Sandabar, Governor of St. Jago, and Ralph Fowler does an uncommonly clever piece of protean acting in the dual roles of the twin brothers. Paul Messink, Virginia True, as the Governor's daughter; Frank Gaunt, Frederick Kerby, Sidney Rogers and Jerry Hess are among others who strengthen the piece. Betty Gray presides at the piano.

Performances begin nightly at 8:40, and on Tuesdays and Fridays bus service to the theater is operated from Dupont Circle.

Nelson B Bell About The Showshops

Miss Cornell Closes Season of Tragedy and Comedy; Will Not Be Seen on Stage Again Until Next March

Ended Season in Boston on Saturday Night to Loll on Her Island for Summer; 'The Show Is On,' Scheduled to Close, Continues Run; Ad Club Honors 'Courageous;' Rialto and Keith's Change Their Bills Tomorrow; Notes of the Theaters.

"THE first lady of the theater" is through for the year.

Katharine Cornell ended her American season in Maxwell Anderson's tragedy, "The Wingless Victory," and George Bernard Shaw's comedy of "Candida" in the Shubert Theater in Boston last Saturday night, June 19. In New York and on tour she acted the Malay princess in the former drama 164 times and the heroine in "Candida" 74 times. She will not appear on the stage again until next March. Her vacation will be spent in her cottage on an island off the Massachusetts coast.

BELL.

Yesterday, Miss Cornell received an honorary degree from Smith College at Northampton, Mass., her fourth collegiate honor. These awards have an unusual interest and possess a peculiar irony, since it was due to the fact that she was unable to pass entrance examinations to Bryn Mawr that she returned to boarding school to teach drama. The indirect result was that she secured an opportunity to make her stage debut, which, in turn, brought her the degrees which otherwise she never would have received.

In passing, it may be remarked that Ray Henderson, of the Guthrie McClintic-Katharine Cornell organization, will sail on the S. S. Mariposa from Los Angeles tomorrow to investigate theatrical conditions around the world, preparatory to Miss Cornell's contemplated tour of the globe.

• • • •

While Miss Cornell was closing her season in Boston, the members of "The Show Is On" company, playing the Winter Garden in New York, were being informed by the Shubert management that business had been so good the past week that the run would be continued. It had been posted to close also on Saturday night. Many of the cast, headed by Beatrice Lillie, Bert Lahr and Reginald Gardiner, already had made vacation plans which were quickly canceled. The Messrs. Lahr and Gardiner were compelled to do some tall scurrying about to secure postponements of motion-picture engagements they had in Hollywood. The announcement of the continuance of the run brought a round of lusty cheers from the entire troupe. No wonder! Jobs are scarce.

The men who wield a strong influence on Washington's purse-strings and who advise what to buy and where, have voted "Captains Courageous" a picture that everyone should see.

The Advertising Club of Washington, which includes in its membership the head of every leading advertising agency in the Capital, the heads of leading advertising and publicity departments and outstanding merchandizing heads, has become so imbued with the inspiration of "Captains Courageous" that it has elected to sponsor Wednesday night's presentation of this epic of the sea.

All members of the club will attend the Palace tomorrow night and at that time will present to Manager Orangelo Ratto a special "Award of Excellence" which the club has created as a tribute to "the high standard, creativeness and inspiration displayed in the production of 'Captains Courageous,' which the association considers one of the truly great screen masterpieces of all times; a picture that should serve as an example of courage and inspiration to all who see it and one that deservedly should rank high in screendom's hall of fame."

This subject has proved a sensation on every screen where it has been shown. Try to get into the Palace!

• • • •

By special arrangement with the producers, the Rialto Theater will revive "Theodora Goes Wild," the picture that revealed Irene Dunne as a comedienne of the first rank, and "The Virginian," in which Gary Cooper achieved one of his greatest successes. Both pictures open tomorrow, "Gallant Lady" and "Roman Scandals" being on view for the last times today. Melvyn Douglas is leading man with Miss Dunne and Walter Huston and Mary Brian cause most of Gary Cooper's trouble.

As a reward for hard work in an almost unbroken succession of pictures, including "Kid Galahad," the feature current on the screen at the Metropolitan, Bette Davis has been granted a six weeks' vacation from the Burbank studios of the Warner Brothers.

In addition to "Marked Woman," which signalized her return to the silver sheet after her recent embroglio with her bosses, Miss Davis has appeared in "That Certain Woman," with Henry Fonda, and "It's Love I'm After," with Leslie Howard and Olivia de Havilland. The last named, a comedy in striking contrast to Miss Davis' other vehicles, has not yet been released.

Miss Davis will remain in Hollywood for a few days in case retakes or added scenes are found to be necessary and then will hie away to parts unknown—to everybody but her.

Tonight will witness the inauguration of the Summer Festival programs in the Sylvan Theater on the Monument Grounds. At 8 o'clock, the Estelle Wentworth Opera Group will present Gilbert and Sullivan's "H. M. S. Pinafore." A half-hour preliminary concert will be presented by the Washington Civic Orchestra. I trust it will not be necessary to bring your umbrellas.

Barrymore Is Cast for Film By Paramount

John to Play 'Drummond' in New Melodrama; Lionel on Lot.

Hollywood, June 21.—John Barrymore today was signed by Paramount to head the cast in "Bulldog Drummond Comes Back" (tentative title), which will go before the cameras next Wednesday, with Louis King directing.

Barrymore will play the role of Scotland Yard Inspector Nielson.

With him in the cast will be John Howard as Capt. Hugh Drummond, and Louise Campbell in the leading feminine characterization. Reginald Denny and E. E. Clive also are set for important parts.

Paramount's signing of John Barrymore brings two members of the "royal family of the theater" to that studio. Lionel Barrymore will be featured with Bob Burns, Joel McCrea and Frances Dee in the Frank Lloyd production, "Wells Fargo," scheduled to start July 6.

The Bulldog Drummond story will be Director Louis King's second picture for the studio, and his first under a recently signed term contract.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, June 21.—After reading some of the letters in the Motion Picture Producers Association files, I am convinced that there are thousands of super-sensitive people in this world who exercise their spleens by writing burn-ups to movie moguls. Most of these tirades are more amusing than important — but they are one of Hollywood's major problems.

LILY PONS.

If the picture's hero shoots a lion, an avalanche of letters pours in denouncing such wanton cruelty to the nice kitty—and in the same mail patriotic gun cranks want to know why the heck the hero used a British-made express rifle when there are good guns manufactured right here in the U. S. A. Don't laugh—any producer will tell you this "unofficial censorship" is a serious matter.

A picture contained an hilarious scene in a dentist's office with a child star trying to dodge the forceps—whereupon an army of dentists lambasted the producer for teaching children to fear dental work. A gangster drama hinted at third-degree methods in a police station—and bluecoats of a hundred cities burned up the mails to express their resentment. The airlines have spasms when a picture features a plane crash; steamship companies protest again filmatic accidents at sea—and foreign governments make formal protests when one of their citizens is portrayed as the cinematic villain.

Of course, producers try to obey all the taboos and avoid stepping on tender toes. It seems to me that it would be only fair if the sensitive ones in every audience would try to realize that a picture is only a picture, that somebody has to be the villain, and that the producer has singled no one out for insult.

Meanwhile, I think I shall organize a Columnists' Protective League.

A note from Lily Pons, during her South American tour, related a "most embarrassing experience." She was giving a concert in fashionable Buenos Aires and had just started her most difficult number when a huge black cat stepped out of the wings, regarded her gravely and then stalked across the stage. The audience chuckled and Lily faltered for a moment, but kept on singing. After a moment the cat reappeared, stood complacently in the center of the stage as though listening with approval and then walked up to Lily, arched his back and began to rub against her legs and purr.

"I finished the concert," Lily wrote, "but the cat stole the show."

The 10-year-old son of a friend told me this story. He and his "gang" were playing baseball on a vacant lot the other day and a foul ball sailed into the street and powdered the windshield of a passing car. The driver—he must have looked like Vengeance personified to those terrified kids—pulled to a stop, clambered out and surveyed the damage. Then he turned to the quaking boys. "It's okay, fellows—forget it," he said with a laugh. "I used to be a ball player myself. Gimme that bat and I'll knock out some flies."

"It was Pat O'Brien," the 10-year-old told me, still somewhat awed. "Gee, don't you love a guy like that!"

Some people certainly have a distorted sense of humor. I stopped at Norma Shearer's beach house (the surf is only a stone's throw from her back door) today and found her greatly excited about a startling souvenir some kind soul had tossed over the fence into her swimming pool. Irving Thalberg, jr., aged six, discovered it and ran into the house to proclaim his find. "There's a funny looking fish in the pool!" he shouted.

And so there was—if you can call a six-foot shark funny!

Deadline Is Set For Proof Kidnap Victim Is Alive

Stony Brook, N. Y., June 21 (AP).—The husband of Alice McDonell Parsons, missing Long Island matron, warned supposed kidnapers of his wife today that he would turn the law upon them if they fail to give him proof she is still alive by noon Thursday.

William H. Parsons, the husband, again assured "the persons responsible for my wife's disappearance" that law enforcement officers and press representatives will not interfere with attempts to contact him until that zero hour.

Parsons spoke in a clear, calm voice as he read his ultimatum to a gathering of Federal agents and news reporters and photographers on the lawn of his home. A few hours earlier Earl Connelley, in charge of Federal agents, announced his men would continue on the case.

Plays that bear grandiloquent names are not necessarily the most difficult. The various type Coups (Vienna, Bath, Deschapelles, etc.) are really not breath-taking, once fundamental technique has been mastered. It is a curious fact that hands which average players try to take in their stride are the ones requiring the greatest precision of play. I refer to hands involving straight or semicross-ruffs. The exact time at which certain cards must be ruffed and other cards cashed is not a question that can be disposed of summarily. Consider the comparatively simple cross-ruff hand shown below.

South, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

North: ♠ 8 7 ♡ K J 9 8 ◇ J 9 6 5 4 ♣ 9 8
West: ♠ Q J 10 3 2 ♡ 6 ◇ 10 8 ♣ J 7 5 4 3
East: ♠ 9 4 ♡ 7 5 4 3 ◇ K Q 7 3 2 ♣ 10 2
South: ♠ A K 6 5 ♡ A Q 10 2 ◇ A ♣ A K Q 6

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♠	Pass	2 N T	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
4 N T	Pass	5 ♡	Pass
5 N T	Pass	7 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

North's last bid was aggressive but not unduly so. South had given terrific bidding and obviously was not interested in a mere small slam. North's excellent trump support and two doubletons warranted some positive action; to go from five no-trump to six hearts would be negative—not positive.

West opened the spade Queen. Declarer won, and saw that his contract depended on the ability to ruff two spades and one club. This seemed fairly simple but, also, there was the question of getting back and forth. The Ace and King of clubs were laid down and a small club ruffed. On this last play East hastily got rid of his remaining spade, and after that there was no earthly way to bring home the contract. Declarer could not take out dummy's other spade without permitting East to ruff.

Successful play should have been simplicity itself. After winning the opening trick and noting that three black cards had to be ruffed in dummy, declarer should have cashed his remaining high spade, two high clubs, and only then should have thought about ruffing a third round of clubs. Since all of declarer and dummy's trumps were high with the exception of declarer's deuce, the entire hand could have been played without a single trump being drawn. After cashing the cards referred to the diamond Ace should have been led, then a black card ruffed and a diamond ruffed in turn with declarer's deuce. Unless this were overruffed—an extremely remote possibility—the rest of the hand could have been spread with the statement that it was a straight cross-ruff.

The important part was to cash top tricks before an opponent could void himself of a suit.

ODDS FAVOR JOE LOUIS, 3 TO 1, IN CHAMPIONSHIP FIGHT

SPORTS — The Washington Post — SPORTS

* X — WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, JUNE 22, 1937 — 17

This Morning

About Nordic Supremacy in Prize Ring.

By Shirley Povich.

If, perchance, Joe Louis should come into the heavyweight championship of the world this evening at Chicago and Nordic supremacy in the prize ring is ended for the time being, there is no reason to believe that it would be a national calamity.

POVICH.

It was looked upon as a pretty horrendous state of affairs 25 years ago, when the prize ring was ruled by a black man, and certain Nordics were fervently praying for the day that would bring the unearthing of a white hope who could lick Jack Johnson.

And since then, although white men have ruled the heavyweights in an unbroken line of succession for 22 years, there have been claims that it would be a bitter day when another black champion was crowned, but in diminishing numbers.

• • • •

In track meets and in football the Negro athlete has established himself not only as a superb competitor but has won for his race a new tolerance in competitive sports. Jesse Owens, Eddie Tolan, Ralph Metcalfe, Ozie Simmons and Fritz Pollard have not created a single untoward development as they out-performed their white rivals throught the Nation.

• • • •

And Joe Louis has been following their pattern of modesty, almost self-effacement. None of the blatancy that characterized the arrogant Jack Johnson has been noticed in Louis' conduct. He has proved himself just a big, playful brown boy who happens to be deadly serious when he's in that ring and gifted with the greatest pair of punching fists since Dempsey.

• • • •

Unlike Johnson, who took unto himself two Nordic wives, Louis has not alienated the white race's admiration for his fistic skill. And the manner in which he has provided for his widowed mother and large family of brothers and sisters with his ring earnings has contributed to the esteem in which he can aught be held.

• • • •

It was Jack Johnson's ill fortune to antagonize the whites at the start of his championship career. When he beat Jim Jeffries for the title at Carson City, Nev., on July 4, 1910, he beat the man who had been a reigning favorite with the whites—the most popular heavyweight champion they ever boasted. And deep was the resentment against the Blackamoor.

• • • •

But it was Johnson's conduct after winning the title that gave the white race an additional cross to bear. He diked himself out in fancy clothes, opened a chain of night clubs, skipped to Paris after being sentenced to jail following one of his marriages, and otherwise flaunted black supremacy in the countenances of an overwhelmingly white nation.

• • • •

Thus it was that Jess Willard who, later developments proved, couldn't fight a lick, was hailed as something of a national hero when he scored a 26-round knockout over Johnson in their Havana battle in 1915. And subsequent events which tended to prove that battle was a phoney were not readily believed by American fandom which liked to think of Johnson as getting his beating on the level.

• • • •

But Johnson, himself, wrote in his memoirs that the fight was fixed and the knockout picture of that battle is almost undisputed testimony that it was. You've seen that picture, no doubt—of Johnson lying flat on his back after the ostensible knockout punch, with his left hand shading his eyes from the high Havana sun, just to make his position more comfortable while the referee was delivering the count.

• • • •

And Johnson's writings told, furthermore, that that knockout originally was fixed for the tenth round. That was the round he was supposed to take the count, he wrote. Mrs. Johnson, in a ringside seat, was to flash to her husband a given signal when certain parties put in her hand the money that was used to fix the fight, and the champion was to fake a knockout.

• • • •

But the rounds dragged by with Johnson getting no sign from his wife, until suddenly, he says, he got it in that twenty-sixth round. And Willard and the white race got the title back on a platter.

Fight Show Off Until Tomorrow

The scheduled ten-round fight between Joey Archibald and Nicky Jerome, scheduled for last night, was postponed due to inclement weather and will be held tomorrow night.

Nicky Jerome, the Brooklyn machine-gun, will rule a slight 6-to-5 favorite over Archibald, of Providence, R. I., when they fight tomorrow night. The entire card will remain intact, Promoter Joe Turner announced.

At the weighing-in ceremonies yesterday Jerome outweighed Archibald by 4½ pounds when he tipped the scales at 126¼ pounds to Archibald's 121¾.

Buddy Scott, Washington, who meets Tiger Red Lewis, Richmond, in the ten-round semifinal, weighed in at 171½ pounds, and Lewis at 166¾.

Unconditional Release Given Shanty Hogan

Nats One Below Player Limit; Pitcher Is Being Sought.

By Shirley Povich.

The Nats, who shed 240 pounds yesterday, are down to fighting weight for the invasion by the Cleveland Indians which starts today. And two straight victories over the Browns have put them in a fighting mood.

The poundage the Washington Club lost did not even entail a workout. Owner Clarke C. Griffith simply summoned Catcher Shanty Hogan into the little stucco office at Griffith Stadium and announced to Hogan that he was being given his unconditional release.

Big Hogan thus took his leave of the Nats for the second time this season. Recalled from the minors when the deal with Indianapolis for Catcher John Riddle collapsed on account of Riddle's ailing arm, Hogan found himself again crowded out of the Washington picture when the Nats made a deal for Catcher Rick Ferrell, of the Red Sox.

When Ferrell joined up with the Nats ten days ago, Hogan's job was obviously shaky. He could not hope to compete with the clever Ferrell for the regular catching job and he required constant work to conquer his weight-gaining tendencies.

On the bench, Hogan began to regain poundage he had shed in training camp. Manager Bucky Harris deemed him of no further value to the Nats and his release has been long anticipated.

But club officials treated him more kindly yesterday than when they shipped him to the minors early in May. Yesterday, they made his release unconditional—and Hogan thus is enabled to sell his services to any minor league club and, as a free agent, pocket the sale price in addition to his salary.

Hogan's release reduced the Nats' catching staff to two—Ferrell and Walter Millies. With the club now one under the player limit of 25, Manager Harris is believed to be making room for another pitcher whom he is trying to buy on waivers.

Today, when the Nats launch their series against the Indians, they will be meeting a team which has skidded rapidly since hitting the road. In a series at Boston and New York, the Cleveland club has lost five out of six games and slipped out of the first division.

The Clevelands suffered another blow yesterday when Pitcher Johnny Allen, a mainstay of their staff, came down with appendicitis and was forced to undergo an operation that will keep him out of the line-up for at least a month.

Manager Harris will send the former Clevelander, Carl Fischer, against the Indians today. It will be a duel of left-handers with Earl Whitehill, the former Nat, hurling for the Indians.

Whitehill beat his former mates in his last start for Cleveland, but Fischer was batted out of the box by the Injuns early this month when he attempted to repeat a previous victory.

Allen Resting Well.

Boston, June 21 (AP).—Pitcher Johnny Allen of the Cleveland Indians spent a "very comfortable day" in Boston's Palmer Memorial Hospital today after an operation for an acute appendicitis last night.

'Huskies' Favored to Repeat Poughkeepsie Victory Today

By the Associated Press.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 21.—Sixteen boatloads of jittery oarsmen piled into their bunks tonight, realizing that within another 24 hours the suspense would be over and three new champions crowned in the thirty-fifth annual regatta of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association.

Just who those champions will be was the major factor in breeding bad cases of nerves and high-strung emotions in the seven rowing camps, four, those of Washington, California, Navy and Columbia, strung along the two banks of the Hudson; three, those of Wisconsin, Syracuse and Cornell, inland from the broad and usually placid waterway that tomorrow afternoon will be the magnet for rowing fans from all sections of the country.

If there were fewer signs of strain today in the Washington camp, it was because the Huskies, who scored the river's first eight-oared sweep last year, have been made such outstanding favorites to repeat in the varsity four-mile and junior varsity three-mile races. In addition, they are ranked as strong contenders in the two-mile freshman event, in which five of the six entries are given a chance to come through.

The Washington "Tall Timbers" also had a pacifying example in Al Ulbrickson, their tall, handsome, quiet-spoken coach, who stroked a Washington eight to victory here in 1926 and whose pupils put on a brilliant finishing sprint ten years later to register their first triumph in Al's regime.

No less nervous than the oarsmen, coaches, trainers and camp followers, however, were the vanguard of the 75,000 spectators who will view tomorrow's races from the observation train, excursion steamers, private craft and the vantage point of the long slope on the east, or Poughkeepsie bank, of the river near the finish line.

Grimes - Ellis Team Takes Doubles Final

Pair Defeats Mrs. Mitchell and Mrs. Pritchard, 6-4, 0-6, 6-1, to Triumph.

Frances Grimes, woman's singles champion, teamed with Anne Ellis, semifinalist, yesterday to win the women's doubles competition of the Grand National Tennis Tournament by virtue of a three-set victory over Mrs. Clarissa Mitchell and Mrs. Marian Pritchard, 6—4, 0—6, 6—1.

After sweeping through the first set with considerable accuracy to overcome the fine play of their opponents, Miss Grimes and Miss Ellis lost complete control of the situation and bowed 0—6 in the second set. Baseline drives were passing the team of Grimes-Ellis in rapid succession in this set.

After losing the second game of the deciding set, Ellis-Grimes ran out the set with a determined charge which gave them five straight games and the championship. In the last game they trailed 0—40, but rallied to win the game on five straight points.

Stage Is Set, Fans Throng Battle Scene

Tonight's Fistic Show May Attract Gate Above $800,000.

By Bill McCormick
A Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, Ill., June 21.—The stage is set for what should prove one of the most thrilling dramas of the prize ring to be enacted here tomorrow night when James J. Braddock, "the grand old man of boxing," defends his hard-earned heavyweight championship against Joe Louis, a sensational young Negro.

Twenty-three-year-old Louis, the youngest challenger ever allowed to make passes at the most coveted title in all fistiana, rules the greatest pre-fight betting favorite of any heavyweight contender in history.

If one desires to wager that the dark Detroiter will win, $3 must be put up against each dollar of Braddock money. Should one care to risk a bob or two on the champion's chances, each $5 risked will get in return $12 of Louis money.

So puzzling have been the training camp performances of both contestants that not much money is being bet in either direction. Louis, the killer, the superman and the most highly touted punch pusher of the generation, has throughout his conditioning grind appeared lethargic, easy to hit and the veriest of novices when it comes to ducking punchs.

Braddock Surprises Fans.

Braddock, considered in most quarters too old, too "washed up" to make even a feeble defense of his crown, has shown in his public workouts a boxing skill, a determination and the perfect condition that always goes with winning performances.

Just as much doubt lies around the possible gate receipts of the heavyweight tussle. Generally expected to draw the first $1,000,000 gate since the heyday of Dempsey at the outset, the ticket sales opened briskly enough to warrant that expectation.

Even through long days of litigation during which the Madison Square Garden Corporation attempted to block this fight to force Braddock into a bout with Max Schmeling for the New York concern, the sales remained steady.

Then inexplicably the box office business began to slump. For days the lull persisted, but just today business began to boom again. Promoter Joe Foley and his co-promoter, Mike Jacobs, who pulls the strings on Louis, insist that the ticket sales already have passed the $600,000 mark.

$800,000 Gate Assured.

Such an advance sale should find at least $800,000 in the till when the final count is made, even if the last-minute business is only normal.

An influx of out-of-towners by railroad, plane and automobile today presaged an even better than normal last-minute sale, which may mean the gross receipts will reach the million-dollar mark set as the goal in the beginning.

Even if the receipts reach only $800,000 each contestant will receive a large fortune for his efforts. Louis is to receive 17½ per cent of the gross receipts, which will boost his total ring earnings to the million-dollar mark.

Braddock, who has devoted 11 of his 32 years to the prize ring, has earned nowhere near the money that has been accumulated by Louis in three years of warfare between the ropes. The champion, however, will receive exactly half of the gross receipts for swapping swats with the brown bomber, so he is assured of about $400,000 for his night's work.

Both fighters, of course, are making confident predictions of victory on the eve of battle. Louis, who on several occasions has called the round in which he will stop opponents, insists he will knock out Braddock in the first round. Should he be sincere in this prediction, it

Bobby Brownell Wins Maryland Junior Golf Championship With 148

Greiner 2d In 36-Hole Tournament

Jimmy Stevens Is Victor in 15-Year-Old Class; Rain Mars Play.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Stroking the lengthy, rain-soaked Beaver Dam course in a pair of fine 74's, Bobby Brownell caught up with a title that had evaded him for the past two years by annexing the Maryland State junior crown yesterday, finishing a stroke ahead of Otto Greiner, of Forest Park.

The slender Manor Club star, District amateur and junior champion, played the first nine in par figures each trip and went two over on the back nine for his 4 over par score. Greiner, trailing by two strokes after the morning round, with a 76, played the lowest round of the day in the afternoon but three-putted the final green for a one-over par 73.

Runs Into Trouble.

Defending titleholder Billy Shea, well in the running with a first round 75, ran into trouble on his second trip with a streak of three-putt greens and trapped tee shots and soared to 78 to finish third. Buddy Sharkey, Indian Spring, was next with 77—80. He won the 16 and 17 year-old class.

Jimmy Stevens of the Army and Navy Club won the 14 and 15-year-old class with 83—80, while Travis Houser of Edgewood Arsenal won the 14 and under class.

The winner played the first six holes with a total of 11 pars and a birdie in the two times over the course. He slipped on the seventh on the morning round and the eighth in the afternoon but birdied the ninth, sinking a 3-foot putt.

Traps Are Costly.

The second nine caused him a little trouble, traps costing a five on the part three fourteenth in the morning round while he failed to par the long sixteenth hole either trip, bagging a pair of sixes. He picked up two strokes on ten with a pair of birdies.

Greiner, Maryland Scholastic and Baltimore Invitation winner, played the nines in 37-39-38 before he found his game on the last nine and stood on the last tee needing par for a 34 and 72. His second shot on the final hole was on the left-hand side of the green and Otto proceeded to go for the putt and the ball slipped several feet beyond the hole. He missed coming back by inches.

W. W. Wagner, jr., played his second nine in 36 strokes after a 45.

Reporter Finds Capital Fans Favor Champion in Tonight's Title Bout

By Bob Garrison.

Yes, sir, it takes a ring natural such as the Louis-Braddock championship fight to stir up the populace of a large city. Everyone from grandma down to baby-dumpling is trying to pick the winner of tonight's title bout at Chicago.

In a four-hour pilgrimage through the city yesterday your inquisitive reporter tramped the pavement and canvassed buildings searching for the Capital's popular choice. But what the one man safari really proved was, not who the majority favors to win, but, rather, that each prognosticator has it definitely figured out.

* * * * *

Not since the Dempsey-Tunney scraps of ten years ago have the soda-fountain pickers had so much to work with. And they certainly are taking every bit of it into consideration in solving the results of this fight.

As far as Washington's going overboard for the favorite, Joe Louis, that's out. Braddock is a slight favorite in the concensus, and this is the way both sides reason:

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen smiled and said: "I look for Braddock to beat Louis the same way Tunney trimmed Dempsey. It's brains against brawn again, and I expect brains to do the trick. A decision for Braddock."

* * * * *

From Natie Brown came the most authentic opinion gathered. He, who lost twice to the Brown Bomber, once on a decision in ten rounds and once in a four-round knockout, believes that Braddock will retain the crown. He says:

"If Jimmy can answer the bell in the seventh he is going to win. Louis does his best work in the early rounds and if he doesn't get to Braddock by the sixth he won't have much chance against the crafty champion. I look for Braddock to last the seven rounds and defeat Louis on a decision."

Jim McNamara, athletic director of the Jewish Community Center, concurred in Brown's opinion. He said, "Louis is not the fighter he was when he met Natie, and Braddock is in good condition. Braddock, possibly by a knockout."

* * * * *

Then there is always the psychic who reasons with advantage and this time it's Grace De Long, 1201 L street northwest. "Although it would please me to see Jimmy retain his title," she said, "I feel that Louis will knock out the champ in six or seven rounds. And, remember, I called the results on the last two heavyweight matches, correctly."

Al Simmons, Washington's left-fielder, and personal friend of the champ's, is certain that Braddock will take Louis. "I know that Jimmy will not be afraid as others who have faced Louis were. He told me last winter he was going to whip Louis, and he will, too."

* * * * *

Ozzie Nelson and Henry Busse, band leaders appearing at local theaters, were quick to jump on the Braddock ticket and Busse affirmed his stand by placing a sizable wager that Braddock will win. Busse said, "He'll keep away from Louis for a few rounds, then win on points."

Goldie Ahearn took the only neutral stand of the day and said that he certainly would not bet on the results. The local matchmaker for Joe Turner's shows advised, "Win, lose or draw, though, I'd certainly like to be promoting that shebang."

And Mr. R. L. Pollio, manager of the Mayflower Hotel, likes Braddock, because he thinks he is the cleaner liver of the two.

* * * * *

Pete Marshall, telegraph operator, who has been watching fights from the ringside since the first battle of Bull Run, looks for Braddock to score a quick knockout over the Brown Bomber. "Braddock is better than he is given credit for being, and will polish off Louis inside of six rounds," says Pete, "and Louis will be removed from the heavyweight picture."

Opinions of others met during the course of the day follow:

Bob Gillreath, 4925 Georgia avenue, likes Louis, "because he looks better in 15 rounds. He will win the title and then drop it in a return match with Max Schmeling."

Charles Hardy, 16, colored messenger boy, picks Braddock. "Although I like Louis, it looks to me that Braddock will win inside of five rounds. I guess Louis is washed up."

Steve Vasilakos, peanut vender who has sold peanuts to Presidents for years, was caught in the middle of a heated argument with city guides at Pennsylvania and Executive avenues. The fuss was ended by Steve when he offered to bet $10 on Louis' chances. He got his bet.

J. M. D. Youngblood, 1124 Twelfth street northwest, Government clerk, looks for a Braddock victory in the late rounds. "I expect another Schmeling affair, with Louis on the floor in the twelfth."

A. R. Gourney, Pittsburgh, Pa., likes Louis on his past record and thinks Braddock will be stale after his long layoff.

William Jones, colored, 1245 Twenty-third street northwest, looks for a Louis victory in the fourth round, and Frank Goldberg, sightseeing guide, took the other side by predicting an eight-round win for the champ.

Cicero Frazier, porter at 518 Fourteenth street northwest, likes Louis, as does David Benjamin, bootblack, and Mark Gerber, liquor salesman at 1349 E street northwest.

Dave Herman, publicity agent, predicts a seventh-round victory for the Bomber, and J. P. Muth, the "Andy Gump" vender at Fourteenth and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, thinks "the white man" will triumph.

Thus you have a cross section of how the selections go. Some like Louis; some like Braddock, but rare is the man who thinks they are equal. I do. It's going to be a draw.

can mean only that he will attempt to rush in for the kill at the opening bell.

Braddock just as confidently predicts he will stop Louis in the eighth round. This would indicate that James intends to play a waiting game, biding his time until Louis presents openings for pot shots to his rather susceptible chin.

Of the two, Braddock seemed to this writer, after a careful survey, to have the better equipment both physically and mentally. Louis is strictly a one-track fighter. When his opposition fails to walk into range of his punching fists, Louis seems at a loss for a course of action. There also has been much dissension in Louis' camp, during his training period. Such dissension is not conducive to good fighting form.

Braddock, one of the most experienced boxers in the ring, is capable of using any one of at least half a dozen fighting forms, should he find that one method is not effective against the sepia slugger, he can change to another. Braddock sincerely is not afraid of Louis, whose presence in the ring has struck terror in the hearts of such as King Levinsky, Max Baer et al. Braddock thus becomes the first man since Max Schmeling, who battered Louis into submission in the twelfth round, to enter the ring without fear and with the ringmanship needed to outmaneuver the Bomber.

For some strange reason this fight has been unique in three respects. Respect No. 1 is that there has been no ticket speculation scandal. Respect No. 2 is that there has been no counterfeit ticket scare. Respect No. 3 is that there hasn't been even a suggestion of a squabble over who shall referee the bout in which the first colored fighter since Jack Johnson is given a crack at the heavyweight bauble.

The choice of the third man in the ring at first lay between five candidates. Since then the choice has been narrowed down to two men—Phil Collins and Tommy Thomas. Both are experienced, capable arbiters, but many believe Thomas is automatically eliminated because he operates the very tavern once run by David Barry, the famous "long count" referee of the second Tunney-Dempsey fuss.

Comiskey Park, the scene of action, lies smack dab in the center of Chicago's black belt. With memories of the Nation-wide racial disturbances that followed in the wake of Jack Johnson's victory over Jim Jeffries in Reno in 1910 in their minds, many are fearful of disorders here should Louis win.

Chicogans scoff at the very mention of such a possibility, pointing out that Chicago never has experienced any such difficulties following any mixed bout. It is significant, however, that some 1,000 policemen have been assigned to "cover" the fight. About 400 of those will be assigned to duty within the park and 600 will stay outside with Joe's colored brethren. Thousands of other policemen will be held in reserve, just in case.

Just to keep the records straight and not that it makes any difference (except that it might help Louis' chances), it may be noted here that the writer, as stated yesterday, thinks that Braddock is a cinch to flatten Louis. The knockout should come in the tenth, eleventh or twelfth round—but may come earlier if James gets a large enough hole for a pot-shot knockout wallop.

Fred Perry Favors American Net Stars

New York, June 21 (AP).—Fred Perry, former British Davis Cup star, thought it "looks a bit like the United States" in the forthcoming international matches when he arrived from England aboard the Queen Mary today.

Ellsworth Vines, former top-ranking American amateur, was with Perry. The two were returning from a series of nine professional matches played in England and Ireland. Perry won six of the matches against Vines.

Budge Wins in All-England Net Inaugural; Crawford Surprises

By the Associated Press.

Wimbledon, England, June 21.—Don Budge, tall, red-haired Oakland, Calif., favorite for the crown, led an American advance into the second round of the All-England tennis championships today but the hero of Wimbledon's opening day was 29-year-old John Herbert (Jack) Crawford, veteran Australian campaigner.

Crawford supplied practically all the excitement afforded by the opening round of men's singles as he defeated Roderich Menzel, towering Zech who was seeded sixth, 6—4, 7—9, 4—6, 6—3, 6—4.

The Australian, who won the title in 1933 but was believed to have slipped so far that it wasn't necessary to seed him this time, proved to the thrilled center court audience that he still possesses one of the soundest games in the world when he's right. Menzel looked like he had been through a wringer when the two-hour match was over. Menzel almost pulled the battle out of the fire when he came within one point of drawing even in the final set after Crawford had gained a 5—1 lead. The Australian, however, had enough left to survive.

Accompanying Budge into the second round were his American Davis Cup teammates, ailing Bryan M. (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta, fifth seeded player; Wayne Sabin, of Hollywood, Calif.; Frankie Parker, of Milwaukee, and Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, as well as the young Kansas City player, Hal Surface.

Budge, the top-seeded player and heavy favorite for the crown Fred Perry relinquished, won a routine victory over Norman G. Farquharson, South Africa Davis Cup player, 6—2, 6—3, 6—1. Grant, still troubled by a heavy cold, did no more running than was absolutely necessary in beating J. M. Hunt, of England, 6—3, 6—4, 7—5, but appeared surprisingly chipper for a youngster who had just risen from a sick bed. Grant still had a hacking cough but thought a few more days of bright sunshine would fix that.

Mako eliminated Jacques Jamain, of France, 6—4, 5—7, 6—3, 6—3; Sabin tripped R. J. Ritchie, of Great Britain, 6—4, 6—3, 6—3; Parker, seeded eighth, trounced J. H. Ho, of China, 6—1, 6—1, 6—3, and Surface put out S. Martenson, of Sweden, 6—0, 6—2, 6—1.

Three lesser known Americans fell by the wayside as Wilmer Robertson, of San Marino, Calif., bowed to Daniel Prenn, veteran German, 7—5, 6—1, 6—2; Larry Hall, of San Jose, Calif., lost to L. Shaffi, of Great Britain, 6—3, 6—4, 12—10, and Charles Harris, of West Palm Beach, fell before Fumiteru Nakano, of Japan, 3—6, 6—2, 6—2, 2—6, 6—4.

Heinrich Henkel, of Germany, No. 3, defeated L. W. J. Newman, 6—1, 6—0, 6—3, and Vivian McGrath, Australia, No. 7, put out Max Ellmer, of Switzerland, 0—6, 6—4, 6—4, 9—7.

Mare Takes Top Charles Town Race

Pukka Heaven Defeats Canteret by a Neck; Red Label Wins.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town Race Track, June 21.—Pukka Heaven, a 7-year-old mare which has been earning her feed almost exclusively on the smaller tracks, clashed with a field that consisted mostly of horses which operated with success at one time or another on the major ovals. Pukka Heaven showed them how and to the cheering of those who backed her chances she drove to the wire to cause the posting of an $18.40 mutuel.

The ancient miss defeated Canteret by a neck with James Boy another length away and she asked no quarter during the running of the mile-and-sixteenth test, labeled the West Virginia Day Purse.

The race was run over a slow track and before a fair Monday crowd of 3,500. The skies frowned up to the time of the feature event and then let loose with a vengeance as the sixth race was being run.

Forward Factor.

Pukka Heaven was a forward factor from the start of the big event. Canteret set the early pace, but Jockey Root kept the ultimate winner along the rail, saving all possible ground. Once in the stretch, Root put Pukka Heaven to a drive and the mare responded by getting up to down her rivals.

The daily double combination of "Seven and Three," consisting of Vanvola in the second race and Bungalow in the third race, paid a $13 mutuel.

R. P. Gillete's Sun Belle, with Jockey J. Sylvester in the saddle, made a show of her field in the day's opening sprint. The Sunwin filly jumped to the jump soon after the start and was not headed. Monologue had some trouble, but closed willingly. Tuleyries Lad was third in the limit field of eight. The winner paid an $8 mutuel.

Favorite Wins.

The favorite players broke the ice in the second race when Vanvolta stepped down to the wire ahead of seven others to pay $3.60 mutuel. Ridden by L. Machado, the veteran mare finished three lengths ahead of Lovely Amelia, with Maple Barbara third.

Sammy Palumbo, with Bungalow under him, accounted for the third race, while in the role of a $7.80 shot. Close to the front from the beginning, Bungalow went through on the inside and was hard ridden to the end. Silver Arch and Sea Finn were the others in the pay-off circle.

Palumbo scored his second success of the day aboard another favorite, Red Label, in the fourth race, named the Mordington. The Petee-Wrack mare, one of the most consistent horses on the ground, was forced to come from behind.

PUKKA HEAVEN, saving ground while forwardly placed, responded to pressure in the stretch to be up in the final strides. CANTERET, sent to the front at once, opened a good lead, but was tiring at the end. JAMES BOY, lacking early speed, moved up sharply along the backstretch, but weakened suddenly in the final sixteenth. TUNEFUL closed full of run. PRINCE PETTIE could not reache contention.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JIMMY D., $8.40, $4.00, $2.80; MORUN, $3.60, $2.80; LUCKY TURN, $4.00.

JIMMY D., at home in the going, raced LADY CIREK into defeat and continued gamely to withstand the closing bid of MORUN. The latter, slow to begin, worked her way to contention and closed with good speed to be wearing down the winner. LUCKY TURN, lacking speed at the start, closed a gap in the final quarter and was going fastest at the end. STEPEE moved up menacingly entering the stretch, but was weakening at the finish.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:32. Off at 5:32½. MISS CATALAN, steadied along while outrun for a half, came around the leaders to reach contention swinging for the stretch and wore down COLORIST in the final stages to win going away. COLORIST ran SUBDALE into defeat and fought it out with little help fgrom the rider. COUNTER PASS, a trailer to the backstretch, gained steadily thereafter. PAULINE H. rallied mildly. JORDAN ROSE stopped badly after going forwardly during the early stages.

D. C. Riflemen Win.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., June 21.—The Washington Postal Pistol and Rifle Club defeated the Frederick Rifle Club in the local organization's first outdoor match of the season here yesterday, 1,952 to 1,886. Chrisman, with a score of 394 out of a possible 400, was high man.

Selections at Charles Town.

Dear Al:

We found out today the reason why Pork Chops, new press-box mascot, picked all the No. 1 horses at the post last Saturday. It seems that Pork Chops' father rubs down one of the horses that ran from an inside position and Pork Chops wanted to make sure we played the right horse so he gave us all of the numbers one. The horse, Chorway, won a race but his owner did not get the purse. The race was for a "maiden" field and it was discovered after the event that Chorway had previously won a race on the "flat" at a meeting of the Rose Tree (Pa.) course. Apprentice Jockey J. R. Hill, injured in a spill here last week, is "doing nicely" it was reported today. Hill developed a severe cold after the accident in which he suffered a torn ear and a badly bruised shoulder. John Manfuso, owner of Aneroid, visited the track today and was all smiles after the victory of his ace in New York last Saturday. Jockey Pete Martinez arrived today and he will ride the Shipp horses formerly handled by Hill.

BILL.

First race—Frisco has worked well and may surprise in this rather open race. Likes this short sprint route and I'm going to string along. Rolling Along is dangerous off that last. If kept in at turns, this one could jolt the talent. Shaggy Ann hasn't run her race as yet.

Second race—Two Aces may run out entering the stretch, but I'm going to take my chances. I know this one has the speed of the field. Royal Business has speed and promises to be close. Scout Allow for the show end.

Third race—Truthfully finds a field that seems to suit her purpose here. She needs the right ride, however. Lady Gursil might improve with a shift of jockeys. Goantell is a possibility.

Fourth race—Whiskora will like the off track and needs only a capable ride by Jockey Root. Radial moves up in the anticipated going and looms as the one to beat. Reigh Tetrarch should be no worse than third.

Fifth race—Ada Wan, with Palumbo to do the hustling, appears to have found the right spot in the field. Hogarty, first on the also eligible list, is dangerous. Chorway downed maidens easily.

Sixth race—War Chat may have needed that last, which was a good second. Poppyman, former jumper, is reported fit. Barcardi Sweep should be a forward factor.

Seventh race—Balmacan is a solid horse and that recent win indicates top condition. Zipalong looms as the one to beat. Then Some, showed much improvement last out and could be a serious contender in this field.

Best bet—Balmacan.

Men Past 40

Many men at 40, in perfect health, without an ache or pain, wonder why they aren't as strong and as vigorous as they were 5 or 10 years ago. Mental and physical fatigue is the cause in the majority of cases. Fortunately this condition can be helped by the use of a recently discovered hormone. This hormone stimulates the glandular system to greater activity—helps build up lowered vitality.

This hormone is now available, together with other valuable ingredients in Zo-ak Tablets (Blue Box for men—Orange Box for women) and are sold and recommended by Unity Drug Stores and all chains. Zo-ak is the formula of a well known American physician so you can take it with confidence. It contains no nux vomica (strychnine) or any other harmful drugs. A booklet called "For Men Who Want to Live," will be sent in a plain sealed envelope by Zo-ak Co., 56 W. 45th St., N. Y. Ask for economy size. Save $1.

Who Is 'Dr. Pepper'?

The name and formula of Dr. Pepper is the result of a legendary story concerning a "Dr. Pepper" of Virginia, and his young assistant, a pharmacist named Morrison. Between them the famous formula was devised, and several years later, in 1886, Dr. Pepper, the sparkling beverage, was introduced to the public in Waco Texas. Today its name is famous in the Southland. Dr. Pepper has the true "Southern Hospitality" that makes friends quickly—it only takes a nickel to introduce yourself today.

Down in the deep South where banjos strum and corn pone is "good eatin'" . . . good ol' DR. PEPPER is the popular thirst quencher. Cold as frost . . . fresh as mint . . . live as a bubbling spring. The flavor? There's nothing to compare it with. You'll just have to taste it yourself! Watch for the red tile sign that says DR. PEPPER . . . it's a sign of good taste. 593 Executives Take Courses At Bank School

Washington Group Enrolls for Two Weeks' Graduate Study.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New Brunswick, N. J., June 21.—With an enrollment of 593 bank executives from 46 States, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico, the Graduate School of Banking, sponsored by the American Bankers Association, opened its third resident session here today at Rutgers University. Tom K. Smith, president of the association, was the speaker at the formal opening exercises tonight in the university gymnasium:

"You come here to study the broader implications of banking as it affects the economic and social organization as a whole," he said. "You do not overlook the newer trends in operating methods, but, as I observe the curriculum I readily realize that there is present here an emphasis upon the deeper responsibilitites of the bankers and his relation to the economic welfare of the people."

Registrants from Washington are: Hulbert T. Bisselle, R. E. Haycock, Kenneth F. Brooks and Daniel J. Callahan, jr., Riggs National Bank; Ralph Endicott, George M. Fisher and Vincent A. Sheehy, jr., Washington Loan & Trust Co.; W. L. Sanderson, Hamilton National Bank; Andrew W. Lee, Charles T. Malone, John C. Baumann, Laurence H. Jones and David M. Kennedy, office of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

The school, which was established in 1935 as a joint educational project in advanced banking studies under the auspices of the association and the university, will this year graduate the first class to complete its courses. Diplomas will be awarded at commencement exercises on July 2-to 193 graduates. The speaker of the evening will be Dr. Francis P. Gaines, President Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va.

During the course of the two weeks' session a number of distinguished speakers have been invited to address the school assemblies. Those announced to date are Dr. F. W. Kemmerer, Princeton University, Princeton, New Jersey; Leonard P. Ayers, vice president Cleveland Trust Co., Cleveland, Ohio, and Frederick Shelton, the Kiplinger Washington Agency, Washington, D. C.

Steel Operations Dip to 75.9 Per Cent

New York, June 21 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week declined .7 of a point to 75.9 per cent of capacity, compared with 76.6 per cent last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today. A month ago operations averaged 91 per cent of capacity while a year ago the rate was 70.2 per cent.

Since the precipitate drop of more than 13 points in the last week of May, a reflection of the steel strikes, weekly fluctuations in the production rate have been narrow. The relative stability of operations has been based in part, trade authorities say, on a well maintained buying. Trade observers said some mills were behind on deliveries.

The Market

Stock Prices Sag in Smallest Trading in Two Years; Wheat Jumps With Crop Damage.

New York, June 21.—Excitement in financial markets was confined to grains. Trading was lively on all the wheat exchanges, which were stimulated by crop damage reports, so much so that wheat was rushed up the limit of the day's trading price range. September wheat closed 5 cents higher at 111⅜ cents a bushel on the Chicago market. Elsewhere extreme dullness prevailed. Francs were firm on the fall of the Blum cabinet. Bonds were nearly motionless. Stocks worked slowly and irregularly lower in a turnover of around 400,000 shares, the smallest business done since February, 1935.

The financial outlook with the new week was about as foggy as the weather. In one direction—the domestic labor situation—the clouds were heavier, and in the other—the French financial crisis—they lifted a bit, but by no means disappeared. It has become increasingly apparent to the country at large that the present labor troubles are the direct result of the rule or ruin policy of the Lewis C. I. O., and every day pries eyes open a bit wider on the extent to which the Government (National Administration as well as various State governments) act in concert or at the behest of the labor leader to coerce industry.

Excesses of the C. I. O. have one favorable aspect. If it is going to come down to a Nation-wide strike merely to consolidate the position of a labor leader, and if armed forces of the Government are to be used to force an industrial organization to come to terms with any particular labor leader, and especially when the minority of workers in a factory on strike adhere to that leader, the country will call for a showdown, the result of which scarcely will be in doubt. It was the general strike in England that finally brought industrial peace by awakening the nation to the dangers of an industrial workers' dictatorship.

Labor Warfare.

Meanwhile the shootings, the bombings and the closing of factories has lasted long and promises to continue long enough seriously to bring down the volume of business in all industries and commerce. Much further interruption to production will deliver to the National Administration a new set of problems, or the old ones with new knots tied in them, and the ultimate solution more likely than ever will be inflation. The Government is finding that the tighter the screws of taxation are put on capital, the less the revenue collected, and outcries about morality won't bring in a cent more money under an unsound system of taxation.

One good reason why the speculative markets are no more disturbed than they seem to be over the outlook is that, with their inherent optimism, they realize that, once labor troubles are brought under control, a considerable rebound would take place in industry. The current rate of profits is ample to support present stock prices. The profit margin is quite apt to be lowered with the strong trend toward higher costs which the wage affairs are bringing, but an offset is also in prospect with rising prices. Taxes, on the other hand, will continue to act as a restraining influence on the share market this summer.

France.

Abroad the fall of the Blum Socialist government had been amply predicted last week. Francs were a little firmer at the start, but the make-up of the government to succeed the radicals may not be one to bring full reassurance to frightened French capital. Capital felt some relief over the refusal of the French Senate to give Blum power to deal with capital as he saw fit, but fundamentally the French fiscal position is rather weak.

The succeeding governments may turn back on the enormous outlay of money — borrowed from the banks—for social services in France, and a halt to shortening hours and wage lifting may take place, but the treasury has been operating on a deficit for a long time, taxes can't be made much higher, and deflationary steps will carry a threat of serious disorder by those who have had their appetites whetted for the sweetness of inflation and baiting of capitalism.

Consolation.

With business falling and with the ramparts of industry under heavy fire from labor's guns, Wall Street brokers are turning to Holy Writ for consolation. The favorite passage today was the tenth verse of the forty-sixth Psalm:

Be still, and know that I am God: I will be exalted among the heathen, I will be exalted in the earth.

More Debt.

The Treasury daily statement for June 15 discloses that the Treasury at last has issued to the Veterans' Bureau Government life insurance fund bonds amounting to $500,157,956 as called for under section 5 of the soldier bonus act of January 27, 1936. When the bonus was paid the Veterans' Bureau already had made loans amounting to about $500,000,000 on adjusted service certificates. The bonus act authorized payment of the certificates at face amount less the loans, in effect giving the money they had borrowed. Probably the long delay in issuing to the life insurance fund the bonds which have now been issued was to prevent a rapid increase in the public debt. It is interesting to note that the $500,157,956 transaction with the life insurance fund was put through on the day that the quarterly Treasury financing was benig recorded in the Treasury figures. The $500,157,956 added to the public deficit and helped to lift the direct public debt to a new high at $36,633,000,000. Since the guaranteed debt is about $4,000,000,000, the total public debt is now nearly $41,000,000,000.

Banking Group Reports Gains In Trade Here

Clearings, Real Estate Loans, Private Building and Autos Increase.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Among important reports in the proceedings of the nineteenth annual convention of the District of Columbia Bankers Association is that of its committee on commercial trade activities headed by Norman E. Towson, an assistant treasurer of Washington Loan & Trust Co.

This committee's review shows that bank clearings in Washington increased approximately 20 per cent in 1936 over the preceding year and that commercial and real estate loans by local banks on March 31, 1937, as compared with June 30, 1936, increased by $6,348,000.

For the calendar year 1936 new building operations in Washington had a total value of $27,098,890, while repairs and alterations increased this figure to $31,553,390. Permits issued included those providing for the erection of 2,030 dwellings and 564 apartments and flats with units for 4,067 families. The foregoing figures do not include those for Federal construction.

In 1936 there were 40,271 new automobiles registered in the city as against 32,227 the previous year. The city, which is said to have the highest per capita use of telephones of any in the world, had 219,389 telephones in service on April 30, 1937, as contrasted with 205,731 for the same date in 1936. Local department store sales, as reported monthly, ranged 10 per cent above the corresponding months of the preceding year.

Serving with Chairman Towson on the committee which compiled this report are President Willard G. Barker, of the Morris Plan Bank of Washington; President M. F. Calnan, of Liberty National Bank; Trust Investment Officer Frank M. Perley, American Security & Trust Co., and President John A. Reilly, of the Second National Bank.

New A. I. B. President.

Frank R. Curda, recently elected president of the American Institute of Banking, was born, reared and educated in Chicago. Entering the profession in 1907, he has divided his time between trust and commercial banking and is at present assistant vice president of the City National Bank & Trust Co., of Chicago.

He became a member of Chicago Chapter of the institute in 1910, and was graduated in 1915, serving on all of its important committees and being elected a director and subsequently a vice president. In 1926 he was elected president of the chapter. He recently completed his fourth term as a member of the educational committee of the Illinois Bankers Association, acting as its chairman for the past two years.

In the national institute, Mr. Curda has been a chairman or member of numerous committees and has taken part in its annual conventions for many years. He was elected to the national executive council of the institute in 1932 and was named a vice president at the Seattle convention in 1936. It is expected he will be a guest at the annual banquet of the local chapter next winter.

Installment Selling.

In his monthly letter to the Washington Association of Credit Men, Manager Henry H. Heimann, of the National Association of Credit Men, calls attention to the steady increase in installment selling, saying much of the recent concern is based on opinion rather than factual information and that he does not consider the situation alarming.

He reports that installment financing houses have taken steps to correct the length of installment payments which in some lines have been recently extended. There is now a movement to require heavier down payments and restrict the time of liquidation. With respect to the volume, it is his opinion that there is much overstatement of the increase in certain antagonistic quarters, with occasional understatement of the increase by some of those who are engaged in the business. He concludes that such factual figures as have been before him do not indicate that generally installment sales are getting out of limits.

Runner to Vice President.

Hilleary G. Hoskinson, recently elected first vice president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, began his banking career as a runner and is now a vice president of Riggs National Bank. Mr. Hoskinson was born in Washington, September 11, 1887, and was educated at public and private schools and in business colleges. He obtained employment as a page in the United States Senate in December, 1900, and served until June, 1903. Following work in the Library of Congress from 1903 to 1907, he entered service of Riggs National Bank in 1908 as a messenger.

In 1923 he was elected an assistant cashier of that institution and took charge of various branches of the bank while they were being established. He came back to the main office and in 1925 was elected a vice president, in charge of the credit department. In 1936 he was elected to the board of directors.

Curb Prices Yield In Light Trading

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 21 (AP).—The curb market stumbled through an uneventful session today with most of the list pointing downward. Volume was small as traders watched the steel strike front. Following announcement of a $5 special dividend, Pepperell Manufacturing tumbled 3 points to close at 120. Sherwin-Williams was nicked 2 points, closing at 119.

The utility group were stragglers, dropping fractions to a point. American Gas & Electric slid off 1⅝, Niagara Hudson Power and Arkansas Natural Gas "A" were lower. Oils pointed down with Leonard Oil, International Petroleum and Gulf Oil fractionally depressed. Lake Shore Mines lost ⅝ and Sunshine Mining ⅜. Slightly better were American Superpower, St. Regis Paper, Creole Petroleum and Northern States Power "A."

Sales totaled 139,000 shares, compared with Friday's transfers of 181,000 shares.

Farm Income For 1937 Put At 8½ Billion

Gains 8.1% Over 1936 in Fifth Consecutive Year of Expansion.

New York, June 21.—With returns on farm income available for a third of the current year, the Alexander Hamilton Institute says that it is now possible to get some definite idea as to the probable annual farm cash income in 1937. The Government estimates that farm income, including benefit payments, will amount to about $4,000,000,000 for the first half of the present year. Actual returns should not vary much from this figure.

While the quantity of farm products marketed has been running below last year's volume, the curtailment has been considerably less than the figures on last year's short crop yields indicated. Either the drought was less serious than the reports indicated or the farmers have been shipping reserve supplies to market. At any rate, the curtailment of the quantity sold failed by a wide margin to offset the higher price level prevailing this year as compared with last year.

4 Billion in 6 Months.

This accounts for the prospect that farm income during the first six months will reach $4,000,000,000, or $704,000,000 more than in the same period last year, contrary to the indication earlier in the year that little if any gain in income was likely in view of the report damage done by the drought.

The outlook for the last half of 1937, however, is for a different situation than that existing during the first half. The present prospect is that the price trend of farm products will be downward, barring a drought which has as yet shown no indication of developing. During the last half of 1936 the price trend was upward. This suggests that the prices of farm products during the last six months of 1937 will not average much higher than during the corresponding period of 1936. If there is any increase, it should be practically offset by a curtailment in the quantity market.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, June 21 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agr.).—The wool market was very quiet today. Quotations were mostly unchanged from last week. Ohio and Michigan country-packed fleece wools were offered at 41 to 42 cents in the grease, delivered East. Good 12-month Texas wool and good French combing fine territory wools in original bags were held mostly at 95 to 97 cents scoured basis, or above.

Court Again Kind To Blind Fighter In Peddling Case

Pleading his former defense of "I'm only trying to make a living for my wife and nine children," Felix Distritto, 34-year-old blind ice cream peddler, again was shown leniency in Police Court yesterday.

Both were charged with selling in a public space after they were arrested by park police Sunday. Several weeks ago Distritto was given a suspended sentence by Judge Edward M. Curran.

Eight other vendors arrested Sunday in a drive staged to rid the parks of scores of ice cream salesmen were fined from $3 to $10.

Among those fined was Abe Milloff, 29, who weighs 320 pounds. Milloff and the Distrittos pleaded not guilty and were represented by an attorney. The seven who pleaded guilty were without counsel.

Bloody Harlan' Witness Faces Perjury Trial

Creech Indicted for Alleged False Statement in Senate Inquiry.

Burly Ted Creech, 36-year-old son of a Harlan County, Ky., mine owner, was indicted by the District grand jury yesterday on a charge of committing perjury April 16 in testimony he gave before the Senate Civil Liberties Committee.

Creech, whose testimony was sought in an investigation into mine practices in "Bloody Harlan," is at liberty on $2,000 bond. He was arrested a few days after he appeared before the committee and gave testimony that allegedly was in conflict with other testimony.

Creech is said to have given a statement involving Richard C. Tackett, another witness who appeared before the La Follette committee. The statement, according to grand jury testimony was that "he (Tackett) came up and told me he came up here and got drunk and made a statement here and did not know just what he was talking about when he made that statement."

In his testimony, Tackett declared he and others were hired by coal mine operators in Harlan County to intimidate union organizers and members who were then conducting a campaign to unionize the mines.

The indictment alleges that Creech, at the time he offered his testimony about Tackett, knew the statements he was making were false. Officers of the United States attorney's office ran into difficulty drawing up the indictment because of the fact no similar indictment ever has been returned here. Creech will be arraigned late this week, but will not be tried until fall.

Seventeen indictments were returned by the District grand jury yesterday. In addition, two instances were reported in which the jurors declared there was insufficient evidence upon which to base a formal presentment.

Those indicted were Harold L. Watkins, Clarence Parker, Jerry Mangum, Harold K. White, Joseph A. Curtis, Ernest R. Barnes, joy-riding; Harold L. Watkins, John F. Briggs, Mary L. Sheckles, Herman Williams and Charles W. Burton, housebreaking; William Cabenits and William W. Robinson, robbery, and John Floyd Payne, violation of section 73, title 18, United States code.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press

London, June 21.—The stock market closed quiet today after a weak morning session and trading was extremely small. Traders were depressed by the resignation of the French cabinet, weakness in the New York market last night and selling which came from Cape Town sources. Gilt-edged securities were mixed; oils, mining shares and coppers sold lower, while transatlantic stocks lost fractions to a point. European bonds were also down.

Paris—Prices in the bourse closed firm and higher with the exception of government bonds, rentes finishing with net losses of 2 to 75 centimes. Bank of France issues moved 50 francs up, and gains were also registered for Royal Dutch and Suez Canal.

Liverpool—Wheat futures rallied sharply on reports of black rust in the American Northwest and higher prices in the American markets, closing ¼d to 9/16d net higher. At one time prices were a penny below Saturday's close. Cotton futures closed unchanged to 1 point lower, selling lower on news of the resignation of the French cabinet and favorable weather reports. Partial recoveries followed, but the market turned dull and featureless.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

With a new French government in the process of forming the franc rallied a little in foreign exchange dealings yesterday. Official control support was credited with buoying up the unit. Quotations on franc futures widened appreciably.

The franc here gained .00¼ of a cent here against the dollar in quiet trading, being quoted at 4.45¾ cents, while 90-day francs were bid at .22 of a cent below spot. The British pound was slightly higher, moving up ⅛ of a cent to $4.94⅞. Holland guilders were unchanged while the Swiss franc slipped .01 of a cent to 22.93 cents.

In London the dollar was 7-32 of a cent lower at 4.04½ to the pound, compared with $4.94 for sterling in New York over the week-end. French francs finished 110.87 to the pound against 110.91 last Saturday.

Paris cables reported the dollar closed at 4.455 cents to the franc compared with a similar overnight New York rate.

Montreal Silver Futures.

Montreal, June 21 (AP).—Silver futures closed steady, unchanged to 10 lower. Sales, 1 contract.

minister, Dr. Joseph Paul Goebbels, warned churches tonight "the new era cannot be held up—the old days are gone forever."

He spoke in Olympic Stadium before thousands of Germans celebrating summer solstice—(first day of summer, year's longest period of sunlight). Two towering bonfires reached toward the night sky at each end of the big arena where Italian Ballila (youthful Fascist organization), Hitler Storm Troopers and costumed folk dancers participated in festivals preceding the fiery propaganda minister's oration.

Referring to the solstice celebration as like that of the ancient Germans, Goebbels emphasized "however, it is not a heathen spirit but the German tradition which motivates us here."

National socialism has no desire to establish a new church, he said. "We have enough churches in Germany already—indeed, sometimes it looks as though we have too many."

Ridiculing those who view Germany as an unhappy land torn by religious strife, Goebbels said "all Germany is happy except a few hundred preachers and sexual criminals who are out of luck."

Supporting the campaign against alleged evil conditions in private Catholic schools, the official news agency distributed a report on the slaying of a 12-year-old schoolboy near the Unterkirnach Monastery June 17. It said an 18-year-old monastery student, accused of the crime, developed a homicidal urge because of "religious hysteria" produced by a "monastic ascetic" atmosphere complicated by rampant immorality in the school.

The 11 boarding schools closed thus far were operated by Catholic lay orders, several of whose members were involved in recent immorality trials. A dozen other Catholic boarding schools in Bavaria have not been affected.

Devout Catholics expressed anxiety over transformation of parochial schools into nondenominational institutions. They feared Catholic teachers may be forced to leave the church to keep their jobs.

Protestant Confessional circles in Berlin were aroused by reports 28 adherents of the Confessional church—including several clergymen—were arrested over the weekend in various parts of Germany. (The Protestant Confessional administration is at odds with the government, alleging the Nazis seek to dominate church affairs.)

Vatican City, June 21 (AP).—The Vatican indicated today it would try to avoid a diplomatic break with Germany, although high prelates believed Germany had violated the Berlin-Vatican concordat of 1933 by changing private Catholic schools in Bavaria into secular schools.

A semiofficial statement said the Vatican would follow a policy of conciliation toward the Reich. It said there was no change in "the general principle of the Holy See" of avoiding acts which might cause responsibility "for denunciation of concordats or breaking of diplomatic relations to fall on the Holy See."

It was believed the Pope's "White Book," a compilation of documents "on the Nazi-church situation" was ready to be issued if there were further anti-church activities in the Reich.

Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, Vatican secretary of state, and the Pope were said to differ on procedure toward Germany. The pontiff was said to favor a strong attitude, while the cardinal favored moderation.

Brings His Bottle to House Session

"Don't you think it's time to take the Government out of the rum business," was the question asked by Representative R. F. Rich, above, when he created quite a stir by waving this bottle of rum from the floor of the House yesterday. He said the liquor was made in the Virgin Islands with Government money and that $2,500,000 had been invested in the rum industry there, and an inventory of its distilleries showed only $860,000 worth of rum, sugar and equipment.

Sergeant-at-Arms Protects U.S. Rum In House 'Exhibit'

By the Associated Press.

The House decided formally but with considerable horseplay yesterday that it's all right for a member to exhibit a bottle of "Government rum" to illustrate his remarks.

It happened this way.

Representative Rich (Republican), Pennsylvania, with a shoebox under one arm, arose to protest measures that "put the Government in business."

Drawing a beribboned bottle from the shoebox, he began:

"I have here a quart of Government rum and I'd like to have the sergeant at arms protect it until I need it for evidence."

Amid laughter, he made his address, gesticulating with the bottle. He said the liquor was made in the Virgin Islands with Government money. Representative Maverick (Democrat), Texas, shouted:

"Mr. Speaker, the gentleman has no right to exhibit a liquor bottle in this House."

"This is Government rum," objected Rich.

U. S. to Expose Insurance Ruse In Tax Evasion

Five Prominent Persons to Be Named Today at Joint Inquiry.

The Treasury will name today five prominent clients of two New New York insurance agents as "tax dodgers," official sources stated last night. These are the men who "sought to evade nearly $550,000 in income taxes in the years 1932 to 1936," according to Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr.

At today's session of the Joint Congressional Committee on Tax Avoidance and Evasion, Treasury officials will take up the second phase of the investigation, the foreign insurance company device, of which Morgenthau said in his letter to the President on May 29:

"Two New York insurance agents have caused the organization of insurance companies in the Bahamas with a view of enabling taxpayers to secure spurious deductions for interest through an ingenious scheme for the issuance of life insurance policies.

"Americans who went into the scheme purported to pay a large single premium for their policies, but immediately borrowed back practically the entire sum. Under the plan the so-called policyholders sought to obtain a large deduction for interest on this loan although the fact was that no interest was really paid.

"By this means five prominent Americans sought to evade nearly $550,000 in income taxes in the years 1932 to 1936.

"This fraud was discovered by the Treasury's investigators and all of the taxpayers have now submitted offers to pay the full amount of taxes, plus interest."

Later in the week the committee will name persons who allegedly avoided taxes by forming personal holding companies of their hobbies, such as their yachts.

Jury Still Sought In Murder Trial

Unable to secure a jury from all available jurors in District Court, Justice F. Dickinson Letts yesterday instructed the drawing of an additional panel of 24 men and women today to try Alonzo Turner, 33, and Elmer Fulk, 39, on dual charges of criminally attacking and killing Mrs. Mary Maier, 36 years old, in a Southwest Washington woodshed several months ago.

According to Assistant United States Attorney Cecil Heflin, Mrs. Maier was pursued from her home by Turner, who posed as a detective. Fulk was involved in the case through the testimony of two small boys who claimed they saw him emerge from the woodshed where the body of Mrs. Maier was subsequently found.

Most of the prospective jurors examined yesterday were opposed to capital punishment and many women jurors said they would be prejudiced against any man charged with the offenses attributed to the pair.

Irey Acts on Complaint Against Steel Firms

By the Associated Press.

Elmer L. Irey, chief of the Internal Revenue Bureau's intelligence unit, referred to his agents in Cleveland yesterday a complaint that the Republic Steel Corporation and the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. have armed their plants in violation of the national firearms act.

The complaint was filed with the Treasury last week by Lee Pressman, attorney for the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Hammer-Slayer Jailed.

cruiser Leipzig off Algeria without hitting it.

Germany was said to insist nothing short of a naval demonstration would satisfy German honor. She would not be satisfied with further notes of warning to Valencia.

Diplomats of the four powers discussed the problem tonight. Britain's foreign secretary, Anthony Eden, had conferred all afternoon with the German and Italian ambassadors about the Leipzig affair.

Twice during the day Eden consulted the British cabinet concerning the Spanish situation.

Roosevelt Stays In; Has 'Cold in the Nose'

President Roosevelt remained in the living quarters of the White House yesterday suffering from what officials described as a cold in the nose.

Capt. Ross T. McIntire, White House physician, suggested the President take it easy because of a strenuous week ahead.

3,000 Dispersed; Chautemps Expected to Head New Government.

Vincent Auriol, retiring finance minister, and other Socialist leaders discussed this problem with Chautemps after Blum had recommended that Socialist members of the Chamber of Deputies show confidence in the premier-designate.

It was the financial situation that caused the fall of the People's Front cabinet. Faced by what he called speculative attacks on the national credit and the value of the franc and a prospective budget deficit of 40,000,000,000 francs ($1,760,000,000), Blum demanded he be given power to deal with financial questions by decree—without immediate parliamentary approval—until July 31.

The bill embodying these powers was twice passed by the Chamber of Deputies, but the Senate rejected first the government's bill and later, Sunday night, a substitute that somewhat curtailed the sweeping powers Blum had asked.

How far a Chautemps government would follow the foreign and social reform policies of Leon Blum was uncertain. Blum had effected sweeping economic-social changes, including introduction of the 40-hour week and nationalization of defense industries.

In the international field his government's leftist policies—friendship with Soviet Russia and the Spanish government—had been a vital factor in the European situation.

Paris in general took the cabinet's fall calmly.

On the Air Today

A look at the radio time table for today should satisfy the listener who wants his programs from A to Izzard. There's listed a college commencement, a description of the annual Poughkeepsie Regatta, an international broadcast from Geneva, drama, music, comedy, a convention, and the broadcast of the heavyweight championship boxing bout.

Every local radio station has its share of features. At 11 o'clock this morning, over WMAL, the commencement exercises of the Princeton University will be broadcast. The program will include the conferring of the honorary degree of doctor of laws upon Dr. Paul van Zeeland, Prime Minister of Belgium and president of the Assembly of the League of Nations.

Ted Husing, of C. B. S., one of radio's foremost sports commentators, will be at the scene of the annual classic Poughkeepsie Regatta on the Hudson. Known as the blue ribbon event in intercollegiate sweep-swinging, the event will be heard on WJSV from 2 to 2:30 p. m. and from 4 to 4:30 p. m. The National Broadcasting Co. will be represented by Bill Stern and Ben Grauer, who will describe the progress of the race over WRC at 4 p. m.

Miss Grace Abbott, of the University of Chicago, will be heard in a talk from Geneva, Switzerland, where she is attending the twenty-third session of the International Labor Conference as the Government representative on the American delegation to that conference. WMAL, 5:15 p. m.

Here's a special note on the broadcast of the world's heavyweight championship boxing match, which is scheduled to be heard at 10 o'clock tonight over WRC and WMAL:

In the event of threatening weather in Chicago at the time of the bouts, the championship event will be placed earlier in the fight program.

Therefore, if Chicago's weather forecaster says it may rain at 9:30 tonight and not before, the Braddock-Louis bout will begin at 8:15 p. m., Eastern standard time. The broadcast will be heard at this time or any other time that the bout will take place.

Clem McCarthy will lend his talents to the blow-by-blow description of the fiasco and Edwin C. Hill will give the high lights of the occasion as well as between-the-round comments. However, 10 p. m. is the scheduled time.

* * * *

The all-star baseball game, which will be played here in Washington on July 7, will be broadcast by WOL, with Tony Wakeman, popular sports commentator, and Bob Elson, of WGN, Chicago.
